VOLUME XLIX, NUMBER 24

Major Peace Now Advocate, Meir Pa'il, To Speak Here

Former member of the Israeli parliament and outspoken proponent of peace in the Middle East, Meir Pa'il will speak on the campus of Indiana University-Purdue University at 7:30 p.m., March 7, in Room 100 of the Lecture Hall, 325 Agnes St.

PA'IL IS A representative of the Peace Now movement in Israel, which has organized protests against the Lebanese war and massacres in the Palestinian refugee campus in Beirut. He will speak on the subject "Is Peace Possible in the Middle East?" Co-sponsors of the free public address are the IUPUI Progressive Student Union and the New Jewish Agenda.

Pa'il is a professor of history at the University of Tel Aviv, where he specializes in Israeli military history. He is a former colonel in the Israeli Defense Force and has been a director of the Military Academy for Officers Training. He left the Knesset in 1980, after serving a 7-year term as a member of the Sheli Party.

A PROLIFIC WRITER on Israeli military history, Pa'il recently challenged Israel to take the lead in creating a nuclear-free zone in the Middle East.

The group for which he speaks, Peace Now, gained international attention for its opposition to the recent Israeli invasion of Lebanon. Peace Now takes credit for organizing a demonstration of more than 100,000 Israeli citizens who demanded an end to what Peace Now calls "an unnecessary and avoidable war." The movement also claims that more than 400,000 people participated in its organized protest against the recent massacres in the Palestinian refugee camps of Sabra and Shatilla.

Phil Schreiber Accepts Bid To Play For U. Of Missouri

KOKOMO — Phil Schreiber, Kokomo High's football star, has signed letters-of-intent with the University of Missouri and will accept a full scholarship at Columbia, Mo. campus.

He accepted the Missouri bid because it offers a degree in physical therapy, his academic goal. He was pursued by Indiana, Wisconsin, Florida State and other universities who sought the services of the 6-3, 230-pounder.

Phil will join the Missouri squad in the fall of 1983, and is excited about the prospective four years. He was told that he was their number one recruit at middle linebacker and that they thought he could be playing by mid-season.

The firing of Lee Corso from Indiana dampened Phil's hopes to become a Hoosier player and pushed him into considering the Big Eight school's offer. Schreiber is one of the state's top discus and shot put scorers.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Schreiber of Kokomo.

Jewish Music Month Begins Sunday

Celebrate Jewish Music Month on Sunday, Feb. 27, 1983 at 7:00 p.m. at the Jewish Community Center, 6701 Hoover Road.

Four well known members of our community have formed a professional performing group. The "Sheleach" Music Group will perform MUSIC FROM ALL AGES — FOR ALL AGES. Their original renditions and special arrangements of Jewish folk music will be a pleasurable listening experience. They will also lead the audience in favorite songs of the past and present. Members of this group are Jeff Goldstein, percussion; Phil Lande, vocal and electric bass; Alan Schwartz, keyboard; and Eugene Starr, guitar.

The JCCA International Folk Dancers will perform a sampling of Jewish Folk Dance styles. Charlie Gamble, coordinator, has arranged an exciting group of Jewish Folk Dances which will be performed by an enthusiastic group of local dancers. There will also be an opportunity for audience participation.

The nominal fee for adults is $1.50 and for children 50 cents. There will be a maximum fee of $4.00 per family.

Get a group together now ... call in your reservation to the Center, 251-9467 or make reservations in person.

be made by calling 848-5368, 844-6971 or 253-0905.

A Viennese dessert buffet will be served and Ms. Plain's books will be available for purchase.

National Council of Jewish Women supports an integrated program of education, community service, and social action. Local community service projects include resettlement of refugees, Women's Poster Project, volunteers at Well Elderly housing, sponsorship of a local youth group, and the Volunteer Guardian Ad Litem Project, appointed volunteers for children who are victims of abuse and neglect.

ADL To Discuss Extreme In America Next Monday

The Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana regional office of the Anti-Defamation League, in conjunction with the Indianapolis Council of ADL, has scheduled a panel discussion on "Extremism in America."

Participating on the panel will be Thomas Cochrun of WTHR (Channel 13), Officer Richard Groves of the Marion County Sheriff's Department, and Ernest Heppner of the ADL. Dr. Michael Kotzin, regional director of ADL, will be the moderator.

The panel will convene at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Feb. 28 at the Indianapolis Hebrew Congregation. The public is invited to attend and to participate.

Purim Time Of Unity Through Sharing

The Talmud Sages state that "all holidays will be abolished except Purim" (Midrash Mishlei, IX). On the fact of it, the dictum is strange; yet we, in our time, are able to understand it better.

The onslaught of evil forces against Jews, never completely absent, assumed the most horrendous dimensions in our days with the mass killing of the Jews in Europe by the Germans. This diabolic cruelty is unequalled in the annals of mankind, which is not lacking in cruel acts.

But even after these indescribable crimes, the attacks against Jews, against the remnants of the slaughtered people and their State, have not disappeared. Among the unbridled enemies of the State of Israel, committed to its destruction, is the same country that gave us Haman — Persia.

Therefore, Jews, more than any other people, should always be on guard against implacable foes. Our best defense is the unity of the Jewish people.

The deeper significance of Purim resides in the moral and religious lessons it imparts: that the tyrants who seek to destroy others are ultimately destroyed themselves. Purim contains an element of rebellion against injustice and cruelty and a faith in the ultimate triumph of just causes and the downfall of evil.

The Sabbath before Purim is called Parshat Zachor, the Portion of Remembrance. At that time, we read the chapter in the Torah "Remember what Amalek did to you" (Duet. 25:17). The reading of these verses alerts us not to forget our sufferings at the hands of our enemies. It imparts a warning not to let ourselves be lulled into a deceptive sense of security in the face of forces threatening us with destruction. Thus, to remember Amalek — of every epoch, kind and persuasion — it is necessary to be vigilant so as to mount and maintain a proper defense.

We must be strong through unity to steel ourselves against future storms.

The tangible expression of this unity in Purim is the obligation "to send gifts one to another" (Esther 9:19), a commandment canonized in Jewish law (Schulchan Aruch, Orach Chaim, Megillah par. 694). The exchange and sharing of gifts is a symbolic act of unity.

Purim is, therefore, the proper time to translate the oneness of the Jewish people into acts by supporting the economy of the State of Israel, the Israel Bond effort being the major instrument of the historical partnership of American Jews in upbuilding Israel.

We should remember that mishloach manot ish lere'ehu (the sending of gifts one to another), is as the name indicates an exchange. We are fully rewarded. Israel, by its very being and by what it means to every Jew the world over, is a vital component of our spiritual life. It is a source of inspiration and pride.

What greater gift is there for one who has invested in Israel Bonds than the feeling that he is part of the historic revival of the Jewish people and their homeland? What better reward is there for one who witnesses the miraculous growth of the country than the right to say: I too have a share in these glorious achievements?

This right and this satisfaction is the gift we receive when we invest in Israel's economic development through the Israel Bond program.

NORM WEISMAN

FLASH! I love this! Talk about predicaments! There's this baseball little leaguer, playing a tough game! The coach orders him to hold up at 3rd base and his mother is yelling, "Come home this instant!" ... FLASH! Adorable Gayle Weinstein (of Bill and Beebe Weinsteins) and a swell guy, Bruce Lowenthal of Los Angeles, will trip the last mile of the Wedding March on May 15! It's now engaged! Congrats Gayle and Bruce!

A True-ism! Do you know for every minute you are angry, you lose 60 seconds of happiness! So keep laughing (and read my jokes)! FLASH! Bill Mervis (of Henriette and Dave Mervis) of Kokomo, slipped into town and ring-ed one of our nicest gals, Karen Benmour, 4th finger, left hand and engaged her for a wedding date of March 26! Congrats Karen and Bill!

FLASH! It's this Sunday, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. — the fabulous USY Purim Carnival at Beth-El Zedeck — terrific food (come for lunch) new fun booths, cakes for sale, and lots of exciting things to do! These teenagers are working very hard to do a good job — let's say "thanks" by attending! Make it a family day and go to the "carnival"!

Reminder Service to the Jewish Singles Club — it's this Saturday, your 39 to 75 years young affair, with dinner at Ciscos at 7:30 p.m. and on to Crackers for a good show! Call Anita Schwab at 251-2414 for more details! ... Travelers! — Eric and Jeanette Taylor are cruising the Caribbean! ... A Tee Hee! His secretary says, "Mr. Jones, your little daughter is on the phone and wants to kiss you" and the boss says, "Please take the message, Miss Smith, and I'll get it from you later!"

FLASH! Happy Anniversary to Meyer and Miriam Satinsky, who are doing their celebrating in Las Vegas! ... Belated Happy Birthday to Sylvia Levinsky, Feb. 8! ... And Mr. and Mrs. Herb Abrams should be celebrating their anniversary around this time — right Herb? ... Ain't this the truth? Into each life some rain must fall, usually on weekends!

FLASH! The charming Carolyn Wilson and the popular Steve Rubenstein were married in Las Vegas on St. Valentine day! Best wishes to them! ... FLASH! A Jewish Musical this Sunday night at 7 p.m. at Beth-El — music for all ages! Hum along with us! ... Joke! Did you know that a true bee-keeper's favorite drink is a "stinger"? ... Personal to the Deborah Sisterhood! I hear that your terrific annual Spring Dance will be on Saturday, March 12 at Beth-El! A great band and a swell organization make it a "must go" affair!

Nice people! My personal award to a great couple, Celia and Mike Yosha, who take different children with them, most every Sunday afternoon to enjoy the ice-skating at Ellenberger Park. It's family ice-skating, and since their own children are grown, Celia and Mike take other children with them and make it a fun afternoon for all! They do their own "big brother and sister" act! ... Belated anniversary greetings

Newcomers Welcomed To City By The Goldsteins

By GISELA WEISZ
255-5019

WELCOMING: There are new couples moving to Indianapolis all the time. Caron and Alan Goldstein welcomed two of them with a dinner party in their home on Feb. 6. The Goldsteins along with Caryl and Dr. Steven Shideler told about the Hoosier capital to Sally and Dr. David Brunner. Sally is from Louisville and her husband is from Milwaukee. The new Humana Women's Hospital is Sally's employer. She is in administration. Dr. Brunner is in the process of opening his new veterinary practice in Broad Ripple. Caron's brother and his wife were the other newcomers at the dinner. Alegria and Nell Fine moved here recently. About a year ago was their wedding in Caracas, Venezuela and the dinner at the Goldsteins was in honor of their first wedding anniversary.

husband took her out to the restaurant called Mother Tucker's. During the dinner a friend, Pat Silverman appeared with one flower in her hand. She sang the happy birthday song for Gertie and handed her the flower. Sharing her happiness were her husband, Ben Dock; daughter Judy and fiancée, Scott Canter; daughter Linda with her fiancée Michael Cohn; another daughter, Elaine Dock and son Murray Dock. After the meal the waiter brought out the birthday cake with the lighted candles. There was still one more surprise waiting for the birthday celebrant. When the time came to pay for the dinner, instead of the check the waiter brought a note from daughter Elaine, who had to leave early. She wrote: "Happy birthday, Mom, and I guess this is a gift for you dad, too, because I paid for the dinner!"

SILVER WEDDING ANNIVERSARY: The daughter of Marilyn and Don Hester, Felicia Hester, gave a surprise dinner party in the Glass Chimney, on the 9th of February, in order to celebrate her parents' 25th wedding anniversary. Congratulating the Hesters were Lenny Cohen who came with Felicia, Denay and Phillip Hester, Nancy and Marshall Lipkin, Peoria, IL, Susan and Marvin Mitchell, and Linda and Herb Melrose.

TIDBITS: Michelle and Marvin Hershenson celebrated their tenth wedding anniversary on Feb. 19 with Michelle's parents, Jeanne and Lenny Koplow and uncle and aunt, Joanne and Roland Koplow. Nancy and Ivan Chalfie had a marvelous time at the Grand Cayman Islands during their recent winter vacation. Brenda and Mel Simon went out to dinner with friends in Ft. Lauderdale, Marilyn and Don Hester. Brenda will stay in Florida during the winter months, Mel is flying down every weekend, But Indianapolis is their real home for the rest of the year.

NEW LIFE: Congratulations to Florie and Marvin Williams. Their grandson, Jeffrey, was born on Dec. 26, 1982 in Houston, Tx. Parents of the baby are Mr. and Mrs. Giotto Einsohn. Mrs. Einsohn is the former Anne Leviton. Mr. and Mrs. Felix Einsohn are the other grandparents.

IN PHOENIX: Natalie and Dan Jacobson came back from Arizona. They met most of the Indianapolis here: Lil and Norman Brody, Ann Frisch, June Herman, Edna and Al Johnson, Bess and Joe Roth and Charlotte and Ben Schuff.

VIEWPOINT: February is a slow month to collect society news from the community. When I find that I have not enough material for my column, I call up people, usually those who have appeared in the past in my stories and ask them what are they doing with their time. This week, as I looked over my telephone list, I noticed something: a new trend. Behind the existing telephone numbers — at more and more places — was written with pen an additional number: the person's office number or a telephone number at work.

But these second numbers are not the husband's... They belong to the ladies. The new trend is that — as my own telephone book proved it — that without much fanfare, women slowly are taking their places in the job-market in growing numbers!

I read the statistics in the papers and heard of the "new professionals" as some news commentator calls the ex-housewives, but now I have proof in my own telephone book. An other sign of this phenomena is the absence of the housewife. When I attempt to call these women in the morning, they are seldom home, while in the past it was customary for mothers and wives to be in their houses on most mornings.

The women of Indianapolis are also trendsetters. I applaud them. At the same time, I would like to know more about these budding careers — in order to share the recently arrived working women's experience with my readers. Please talk to me!

TO LEARN: Moshe Arens was the scheduled speaker for the National Council of Jewish Women's convention in March. Now that he became the Defense Minister of Israel, someone else might have to give the keynote speech in Washington. From Indianapolis with the leadership of president Caron Goldstein, the attending delegates will be Sharon Garelick, Kathy Holland, Sharon Jacobs, Elaine Kline-man, Eve Perlestein, Carole Stein, Marilyn Spitzberg, Pam Salon and Claudia Talesnick. Jean Kirkpatrick is also scheduled to speak on this NCJW convention.

SURPRISE: Gertie Dock's birthday fell on Feb. 10. Her

Tennis Star Margolin Plays In Tournament

By GISELA WEISZ

"There was always a myth that Jews cannot be good athletes," said Stacy Margolin, who participated in the GINNY Tennis Tournament in Indianapolis, Feb. 7-13. She is a living proof that the myth is just that. A myth.

To stress her point, the 23-year-old Jewish girl from Beverly Hills, Ca. started to list well-known outstanding athletes in the field where she excels, tennis: Brian Gottfried, Fl. from the U.S. Davis Cup fame; Harold Salomon, Andrea Leand, Dana Gilbert and others.

Stacy started to play seriously at age 10. In 1977 at the Maccabiah Games in Israel — the sport event which is featured every four years and fashioned after the Olympics — Stacy Margolin won a gold, a silver and a bronze medal. Eighteen months ago she was the 18th ranking tennis player in the world. She earned (Continued On Page IN 18)

Worst Relations In Years With U.S.

Little Movement In Middle East; Arens Calls For Patience By U.S.

Movement towards some solutions of the problems facing peace in the Middle East was slow this week.

THERE WAS some slight agreement in the talks between Israel, Lebanon and the United States for withdrawal of foreign troops from Lebanon, and Yasir Arafat was able to prevent his PLO cohorts, meeting in Algiers, from destroying chances of a Jordan solution to the West Bank impasse. Meanwhile in what seems to be his parting appeal to the United States, Moshe Arens, the successor to Ariel Sharon as Defense Minister of Israel, he called for a better understanding by the United States for the need to make haste slowly and give Israel credit for opening possibilities as the result of the Lebanon incursion.

Barbie Case Throws Light On Bringing Nazis To U.S.

NEW YORK — One result of the Barbie case has been to secure general admission that acting in what it considered the best interests of the United States following World War II, some of the worst of the Nazi war criminals were brought to the United States secretly despite their obvious guilt.

THE NAZIS were considered authorities on Communism, plus in some cases they were scientists who could help the U.S. war effort.

Even Hitler's deputy Foreign Minister, Gustav Hilger, was brought to the United States,

He voiced what seems to be the theme song of the moment in Jewish official circles that it is not President Reagan but Caspar Weinberger, Secretary of Defense, who has designated Israel as the criminal holding up progress towards a peaceful solution. The resolution adopted by the B'nai B'rith Anti-Defamation League at its recent national commission meeting, took the same stance. ARENS ADMITTED that differences between Israel and the United States were at their worst in recent years. Without mentioning Weinberger by name, Arens said, "You have got some people in the Administration who would like to pick up the dividends and kick us in the teeth at the same time. He was referring to the United States' refusal to agree to permit Israel to observe the results of the inspection of the

as documented by George F. Kennan, the historian and former diplomat.

Martin Mendelsohn, who is the Washington lawyer for the Simon Wiesenthal Center of Los Angeles, a former investigator of war criminals in the Justice Department had his own theory. "Whether we are comfortable with it or not, we are dealing with something that is on the public record," he said.

IT HAS BEEN revealed that the United States aided Klaus Barbie to escape. He has twice been convicted to death by French courts.

captured Russian weapons in the Lebanon War, thus leading to an impasse with Israel not allowing the United States to inspect the captured armaments.

The strength of Mr. Begin was shown when three motions of non-confidence in the Knesset lost by 64 to 56. The victory was not expected and it ruled out any elections in the immediate future. The motions, introduced by the Labor Alignment and two other minor parties, were bundled together in the single vote and followed the report of the investigative committee on the massacres at the two Palestinian camps in Beirut.

MEANWHILE King Hussein seems not to have learned much either from his trip to the United States or from the Lebanese War. Returning from a state visit to Yugoslavia, he put his name to a joint communique with President Stambolic calling for Israel's withdrawal from all of the West Bank and recognition of the PLO.

Yeshiva Students Had A Complaint

JERUSALEM — A sign shop was vandalized, presumably by Orthodox students of the Belz Yeshiva who resented the shop's woman assistant who provoked them by sitting outside of the shop as the students passed, forcing them to look at her.

Best Word In Years

Jewish Family Makes Comeback

PHOENIX, Az. — The best word the American Jewish community has heard in years came from an official of American Jewish committee who asserted that there has been a turnaround by Jewish young who now want a family and more than a single child.

Yehudah Rosenman, national director of the American Committee's Jewish Family Center in New York, told of the findings of interviews with 1,200 college students on 14 campuses.

THE SURVEY SHOWED THAT 92 PERCENT of those contacted plan to get married and many absolutely oppose only one child.

By a quirk of sociology, the three reasons the Jewish family was in trouble heretofore are the same causes for the reversal, Rosenman stated, according to a Jewish Telegraphic Agency report.

First was economic, education and emotional independence and maturity of women. Next was the continued diminution of Jewish law and values on individual Jews, and finally, the impact of the sexual revolution, of new values placing the emphasis on the individual's happiness, pleasure and fulfillment.

THESE SAME REASONS ARE CAUSING a return to Judaism. "After a short odyssey into the 'me' experience, lots of kids are finding themselves feeling empty, alienated, lonely and purposeless," he said.

Even more encouraging was the impression the unaffiliated young Jews were returning to Judaism through the opportunity for study and practical experience with tradition. "We have to start building substantive educational programs with original texts where people work through their tradition," he said.

ROSENMAN ADDED THAT WHILE LESS THAN half of American Jewish families are intact today as a unit, young Jewish adults are reverting back to traditional family structures. He gave a report of the findings in preparation for the three-day western regional conference here of the Jewish Family Center.

Nuclear Threat Is Peace Inducement

JERUSALEM — The question of Israel's nuclear capability has been brought into the open by a book by Dr. Shai Feldman, 33, research associate at Tel Aviv University's Center for Strategic Studies. He calls for Israel to announce its nuclear capability, meanwhile withdrawing from most of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. His theory is that the threat of nuclear retaliation if Israel's existence is in danger would deter the Arabs from any serious strike against Israel, while returning the West Bank would tend to calm down the present difficulties preventing any chance of a peace agreement.

Social Problems Massive As Israel Turns Eyes Away

JERUSALEM — Employing the recent protest by directors of government hospitals and their senior medical staffs that "patients are dying because of overcrowding, lack of nurses, support staff and equipment, The Jerusalem Post recited a litany of what's wrong in Israel's social climate.

"IT IS NOT quite clear," the paper stated editorially,

"why Israel, which publicly takes such pride in its medical standards and services should be faced with a health care crisis.

"But then neither is it clear why a people which has always placed such a high value on education should now be appraised that 20 per cent of the pupils who reach seventh grade cannot really read or write. Or why half the

Arab children of Jaffa do not attend school. Or why the ledgers of the nation's courts are so crowded and so far behind as to make a mockery of the system of justice. Or why the conditions of the nation's prisons are such that they breed recidivism rather than reform. Or why the nation's elderly are condemned either to lonely isolation or total dependence on their children since there is no adequate network of old-age homes. This list of such social failure is almost open-ended."

THE EDITORIAL added that all the blame cannot be placed at the feet of the Likud Party, but concluded that "the Likud, under Mr. Begin, even more than Labor has focused almost all its energies and concerns on politics, both external and domestic, and settlement on the West Bank at the expense of all other areas of social concern."

The result, the editorial stated, would be "the continuous deterioration of the nation's quality of life, the mounting incentives for emigration, the disincentives for immigration, and the growing social pathologies we are imposing on the nation's future."

Calls For Considering Reagan Proposals

Klutznick Sees Israel Redeemed

NEW YORK — Why he abstained from commenting on the events in Lebanon was explained by Philip Klutznick in a speech before the 1983 Human Rights Luncheon here.

The former president of the World Jewish Congress who served in the Carter Cabinet, said that this was his first public speech on the subject, even though he had been asked to write and to chair a few conferences.

"I DID NOT," he wrote. "When 400,000 marched in Tel Aviv, they spoke louder than any words of mine and they spoke for me as for themselves. When the Israel government established the Commission on inquiry, I felt that this step, added to the Tel Aviv march, redeemed the honor and the soul of the Jewish people and the Jewish State. I determined then to abstain from advocacy and to await the findings of the inquiry."

The speech was delivered before the findings of the Inquiry Commission were released.

MR. KLUTZNICK defended the right of the diaspora to differ with Israel policies.

"We cannot be one in our need for each other," he stated, "and be separated in our ability to speak or write the truth as each of us sees it... The notion that silence is politically wise is only true as far as the holders of views criticized are concerned... The real strength of Jewish life has been its sense of commitment and willingness to fight for the right even among ourselves."

HE STATED the same view in another way.

"It is not assent or dissent — it is that we desperately need each other and need to understand each other. How else to do this except by forthright and honest discussion based on mutual respect and common concern for the future of all Israel."

Mr. Klutznick then drew a picture of Israel as the Switzerland of the Middle East. "It has skills, it has the productive leadership, it has built a great banking facility and it has a loyal people."

HE OUTLINED what would happen if peace were to come to the Middle East.

"First of all," he said, "I am convinced that immigration would increase. The Soviet Union might even be induced to quit behaving as they have the last year. Jewish youngsters from the West would seek opportunities in the kind of country that would emerge.

In my judgement, the economy of the State of Israel could grow in 10 years, in present values, by as much as 50 percent."

HE THEN criticized Israel for not considering the Reagan proposals.

"I stand here," he asserted, "as one whose Democratic politics are known to most of you. Yet I praise the President of the United States for having taken a dangerous political initiative, from his point of view, in order to reopen the discussion of peaceful settlement. Clearly, there are things in his plan that will never see the light of day. Proposals for peaceful settlements never finish the way they start. But to reject talking about it, as Israel initially did, is to open the door to greater dangers."

HE PERSISTED in his view.

"We must put ourselves in a frame of mind that travelling the path of peace has enormous potentials. I have been saying this because I believe with all my heart that we can, by travelling that path, have a better chance for preserving not only the blessed State of Israel, but preserving the Jewish people in the world. It is not enough to say we are ready to make peace. We must be prepared for additional tough decisions to achieve that goal."

Catholic College Invites Jews

BALTIMORE — A Catholic College which called in Jewish community leaders to a breakfast in order to stimulate Jewish enrollment is Loyola College here. It openly admits that it wants Jewish students.

There are only 40 Jewish students in a student body of 2500. In the evening classes, the ratio is better than 389 out of 3,500.

There is a requirement that calls for two theology courses for graduation, but these for Jewish students could be a course taught at the school by Rabbi Floyd Herman of Har Sinai Temple, or even at the Baltimore Hebrew College.

The college is earmarking financial aid to high schools in Baltimore which are largely Jewish, based on academic performance and student activities, not on financial need.

Jewish Heavyweight Turns Pro At 17

By SHEL WALLMAN

Track & Field News, the sport's bible, has released its World and U.S. rankings for 1982. Heading the list of Jewish athletes is Arizona State's Gary Wiliky, 15th best in the world at tossing the shot-put. Dan Schlesinger, the rags to riches marathon man, is No. 26 world ranked, while Canadian David Edge, a 1981 Maccabian, was No. 36. Finally, Mark Handelman, the South African who attends USC with an Israeli visa, was the globe's 45th best at 800 M. Among U.S. leaders, Boris Djerassi was No. 13 in the hammer throw, Gary Wiliky was No. 15 in the discus, Brian Mondschien (paternal) was No. 24 in the decathlon, Ken Wynne of Penn State was No. 25 at 800 M.s, Tennessee's Larry Rosen was No. 36 in the discus and Florida State grad, Robb Gomez, was No. 46 at 1500 M.s.

Although only 17 years old, heavyweight Dorian Malamed has turned pro and is 4:0 with 3 KO's. All four bouts were held in Atlantic City. A number of states, including neighboring New York, won't license fighters until they reach their 18th birthday. Rich Mendel (Paternal), whose dad is a lawyer and whose mom is an anesthesiologist, turned pro on Feb. 16th. The 21-year-old pre-med student at Pennsylvania has won the Middle Atlantic American Boxing Federation title in 1981 and 1982 and the Pennsylvania Golden Gloves in 1981. When questioned, Mendel stated, "...I'd like to see how far I can go as a pro. I can't say I have a real clear-cut objective, but every fighter likes to think he can win the championship. I'm no different."

Swimming World, that sport's bible, has also released its list of World and U.S. leaders for 1982. Leading the pack of Jewish tankers is Dara Torres, 15, of Beverly Hills, CA., the world's 3rd best in the 50 M. Freestyle and 19th in the 100 M. Shannon Orrutt of Mission Viejo, CA., is the globe's 18th best in the 100 M. Breaststroke and 12th in the U.S. in the 200 M. Dorie Green of San Mateo, CA., was the No. 12 American in the 100 M. Butterfly. On the men's end of the pool, John Waldman of Indiana was world ranked No. 11 in the 100 M. Breaststroke and the No. 22 American in the 200 M., Eric Kaufman of Orinda, CA., was America's 10th best in the 200 M. Backstroke and No. 17 in the 100 M.

The College Basketball Preview continues:

Ken Lesser (Soph) — U of Conn. at Hartford-5:10 (G) from Newington, CT. Ken is the starting point-guard and is team captain although only a soph.

Bill Sachs (Fr) — Ithaca-from S. Orange, N.J. Billy, a graduate of Seton Hall Prep, leads the J.V. with a 16 ppG average.

Rick Brodsky (Jr) — Wesleyan-6:3 (F) from Staten Island, N.Y. Rick is a valuable reserve scoring at a 3.5 ppG clip.

Yeshiva's Joe Eaves was selected to the All-Decade team of the Independent Athletic Conference (1973-1982). Eaves holds the IAC record for assists with 44 in seven games. Joe is quick, can lead the break, penetrates, passes off, shoots from the outside and would play the point on this dream team.

Peter Deutsch of F&M was named to the ECAC Div. III Weekly Basketball Honor Roll after netting 60 pts, snaring 20 rebounds, making off with 8 steals and shooting 75% from the floor to pace the Diplomats to a 3:0 week.

Danny Schayes, the Rodney Dangerfield of NBA centers, was swapped from Utah to Denver. With Dan Issel nearing retirement, the trade could have a silver lining for Dan, despite his loss of a starting assignment.

SPORTS SHORTS

Dave Jacobs, a place-kicker who has failed to find a permanent notch in professional football with five different teams since the 1978 NFL draft, was released by the N.J. Generals of the fledgling USFL.

Here is one for the record books. At the U.S. Championships held in Pittsburgh, the Nos. 1, 2 and 3 women partners in the Senior Dance Pairs were all Jewish. Winning the gold was Judy Blumberg of Tarzana, CA, the silver went to Elissa Spitz of Short Hills, N.J., while the bronze was captured by Michigan's Carol Fox.

Van Campaign Moves Slowly To $3000

The fund to provide a recreation van for the Israel Defense Forces moved ahead slowly, not quite at the $3,000 mark as the largest gift reported this week, $100, came from the Beth El Congregation Religious School in Pittsburgh.

The $500 matching gift, if religious schools around the country equal that amount, took a long stride forward as the Keren Ami Fund of the religious school of Beth El Congregation in Pittsburgh contributed the $100. Only $355 still remains to be donated to secure the $500 matching amount.

Meanwhile a Jewish War Veterans Fund, from Long Island City, No. 110, produced $83. If other veteran posts join in, the campaign should move along much quicker.

The David Kaufman Post of the Jewish War Veterans of America of Rochester already has agreed to match every dollar received, in effect a total of $6,000 so that when the drive hits the $9,000 mark it will have gone over the top and the van, which will have been ordered by that time, will be moving from camp to camp to fill the spare time the soldiers have on their hands.

The religious school donations are being shown in a separate listing each time new contributions are announced here.

THE VAN would include not only books and games and TV sets, but all kinds of attractions that would appeal to an adult group who have nothing to look forward to except their next leave of absence. Army

Hypnotism Used As Males From Russia Circumcised

NEW YORK — How he used hypnotism to allay the pain of circumcision of adult Russian Jews was told by Dr. Morris Mandel in The Jewish Press here.

APPROACHED by the Lubavitch to be helpful, Dr. Mandel came to the Brooklyn Jewish Hospital where from 10:30 a.m. into well that night mohels, assisted by doctors, performed the traditional rite.

The first to be operated on was a 19-year-old youth. "I began hypnosis," he wrote.... "the youngster responded, and fell into a hypnotic trance. I tested him for any possible pain reactions, and then was certain he was ready for circumcision."

CONTINUING, he said: "Both the mohel and the surgeon began their work. As the circumcision was coming to an end, I told him that I would count backwards from three to one, he would open his eyes, be aware, smile and say, 'mazel tov'. And that is what he did."

Growing Support In Israel For West Bank State: Peled

By GERALD H. TURNOY
OAKLAND, Ca. (P-O) — Support for a Palestinian state on the Jordan's West Bank and in the Gaza Strip is growing substantially even in the Knesset, white-haired retired Israeli Gen. Mattityahu Peled declared here.

INTERVIEWED on a television station, Peled, who has received Israeli government criticism but no official censure for meetings with Yasir Arafat, described the PLO leader as an astute man with a keen knowledge of the situation of Palestinians and conditions throughout the Arab world.

Of Ariel Sharon's demotion from Minister of Defense, Peled said he hoped heightened civil attention and supervision of military affairs would result, but noted this was not called for in the official report on the Beirut massacre of Palestinians by Christina Phalangists.

ISRAEL'S ARMY is unnecessarily large, Peled added, emphasizing the need for effective reserve strength rather than spending 20-30 percent of Israel's gross national product on military needs.

AN AMERICAN contact group, still small, to support the Palestinian cause in Israel was formed a year ago in Downers Grove, Ill.

Sharon brought back from the U.S. a year ago a document declaring Israel should be strong enough in the air to attack anywhere up to the Persian Gulf in the event that America's source of oil is threatened in the area, Peled said. He warned that such a policy is disastrous because of its possible consequences, although he did not spell out what the consequences would be.

CONCERN that civil control of the military remain strong goes back to the days of Ben Gurion, Peled stated. He emphasized that all government leaders have had the highest respect for Israel's military organization throughout its history, even though the military has exceeded its authority a number of times.

Flashbacks In Jewish History

As Rabbi Wasserman Went To His Death

By RABBI A. P. BLOCH

July 6, 1941 — Rabbi Elchanan Bunim Wasserman, eminent talmudic scholar and teacher, and 12 other distinguished rabbis were executed by the Nazis in Kovno, Lithuania.

The number "6 million", which epitomizes the totality of the Holocaust atrocities, tends to obscure in the minds of many people the identity of thousands of leading personalities who lie buried in the unmarked grave of European Jewry. The significance of a single individual, no matter how prominent, pales in the tragedy of a loss of 6 million souls. As time goes by and the numbing effect of the number loses some of its paralyzing force, the name of individuals comes to the fore.

THE NAME of Rabbi Wasserman is hardly known to the Jewish public. To talmudic scholars and yeshiva students, the name identifies a man of great intellect, compassion, piety and extreme modesty. His heroism and serenity in the face of death culminated a life dedicated to scholarship and the espousal of ethical conduct.

Rabbi Wasserman was born in Lithuania in 1875 and received his education in the world famous yeshiva of Volozhin. His character and personality were shaped in Radun under the tutelage of Chafetz Chaim, the greatest moralist teacher of the 20th century.

AFTER World War I Rabbi Wasserman established an academy at Baranowicz, Poland. The reputation of the school attracted students from many parts of the world. The many responsibilities of a head of a school did not keep Rabbi Wasserman from devoting much time to the writing of scholarly works and to a full schedule of public activities. When Germany invaded Poland, Rabbi Wasserman sought refuge in Vilna. It was during a visit to Kovno that he was trapped by Lithuanian fascists.

In the bleak hopelessness of the situation in Kovno, Rabbi Wasserman and other eminent scholars formed a study circle. It was in the midst of one of his lectures that the members of the circle were seized by the Lithuanians.

THE RABBIS were taken to the 9th Fort, a notorious place of wanton executions. A Jew who survived the Holocaust witnessed the rabbi's march to the Fort. He tried to encourage his colleagues with a few calm words. "The time is short, let us sanctify the name of God...The fire which will destroy us will eventually bring new life to the people of Israel."

Hoffer's Historic Remarks On Israel Are Resurrected

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A piece written by Eric Hoffer some few years ago was resurrected by Rabbi Joshua A. Haberman, here, to bolster the Israeli position.

The spiritual leader of The Washington Hebrew Congregation, prefaced the printing of Hoffer's by now historical piece which ranks with those by Leo Tolstoy and even Mark Twain in Jewish circles in his bulletin. "Israel's critics are ceaselessly rebuking the State for any number of wrongs. Isn't Israel doing anything right?"

He then told his congregants that the "statement by Eric Hoffer rings as true today as when it was first published a few years ago," and reprinted it:

"The Jews are a peculiar people. Things permitted to other nations are forbidden to the Jews.

"Other nations drive out thousands, even millions, of people and there is no refugee problem. Russia did it; Poland and Czechoslovakia did it; Turkey drove out a million Greeks, and Algeria a million Frenchmen; Indonesia threw out heaven knows how many Chinese — and no one says a word about refugees.

"But in the case of Israel, the displaced Arabs have become eternal refugees. Everyone insists that Israel must take back every single Arab. Arnold Toynbee calls the displacement of the Arabs an atrocity greater than any committed by the Nazis.

"Other nations when victorious on the battlefield dictate peace terms. But when Israel is victorious it must sue for peace. Everyone expects the Jews to be the only real Christians in this world.

"Other nations when they are defeated survive and recover. But should Israel be defeated it would be destroyed."

"No commitment to the Jews by any government, including our own, is worth the paper it is written on. There is a cry of outrage all over the world when people die in Vietnam or when two Negroes are executed in Rhodesia. But when Hitler slaughtered Jews no one remonstrated with him.

"The Swedes, who are ready to break off diplomatic relations with America because of what we do in Vietnam, did not let out a peep when Hitler was slaughtering Jews. They sent Hitler choice iron ore, and ball bearings, and serviced his troop trains to Norway.

"The Jews are alone in the world. If Israel survives it will be solely because of Jewish efforts. And Jewish resources.

"Yet at this moment Israel is our only reliable and unconditional ally. We can rely more on Israel than Israel can rely on us. And one has only to imagine what would have happened last summer had the Arabs and their Russian backers won the war to realize how vital the survival of Israel is to America and the West in general.

"I have a premonition that will not leave me: as it goes with Israel so will it go with all of us. Should Israel perish, the Holocaust will be upon us."

Low Profile Suggested On Cross City Supports

By RABBI ALAN WEITZMAN

Our Jewish community is confronted with a stick issue.

The Berks County Chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union has expressed opposition to the City of Reading's annual display of a luminated Weitzman cross on the fire tower atop Mount Penn during the Easter season. The city purchased the cross, maintains and installs it each year, and pays for the electricity used to illuminate it. The use of public property and tax monies to display a purely religious symbol surely violates the First Amendment to the United States Constitution.

THERE IS precedent for removing the cross, for example, in 1978 the California Supreme Court ruled that "the city should be enjoined from displaying a lighted single barred cross on the Los Angeles City Hall by any means whatsoever." Prior to this ruling, Los Angeles had displayed the cross for 30 years. There is certainly a difference between bringing a suit in a large city with many Jews, in contrast to a small town with a few Jews.

ACLU's letters to Reading's city council have gone unanswered. A Councilman has told the local newspapers that display would not cease. Informally the ACLU has been told if they want to bring about change, the city must be sued. The Reading synagogues and Federation have been asked by the Civil Liberties Union to support their position and if need, be prepared to take it to court.

HERE IS where the rub exists. Certainly in principle we are in favor of separation between Church and State. Yet in a community with our history of anti-Semitism, if we take the lead in this cause, we will pay the price. Our buildings will be defaced with swastikas; we will receive threatening telephone calls, etc.

My counsel is to let the ACLU work through the Council of Churches. Let Christians debate this with other Christians, and let us keep a low profile. There are too many important causes to be fought for us to engender a great deal of ill will over this.

Orthodox Peace Movement Challenges Gush Emunim

NEW YORK — A peace movement among religious Jews in Israel, called Paths to Peace, was launched with 2000 Orthodox Jews, a news story from the Manchester Guardian in the Sunday English section of the Morning Freiheit relates.

THE SIGNIFICANCE of the new movement is that it is a break in the Orthodox ranks which has spawned Gush Emunim, the Bloc of Faith, which has been the leader in demanding that the West Bank is part of Israel.

Questions raised by the Lebanon war is behind the break in the ranks of the Orthodox.

EVEN the National Religious Party in the Knesset seems to be split over support of every Begin policy.

"What we want to show," said Gerald Cromer, treasurer of the new movement, "is that there is an alternative religious view and that it is legitimate. We don't see ourselves as outsiders. It is Gush Emunim that has deviated from religious Zionism. We're returning to what was once the norm.

"The war changed people's attitudes towards what they had to do with their opinions. The coin dropped. Many religious people began to realize that the extension of the war and Sabra and Chatilla were not merely episodes, but were a logical conclusion of everything the government was doing. It is important for us to show that that is what it is about. It was not a one-time thing. If you opposed Sabra and Chatilla, the extension of the war, you have to go on acting."

Detective Work By Archaeologist

3000-Year-Old Massacre Solved

BALTIMORE — Sherlock Holmes has nothing on Dr. Barry Gittlen of this city, who was able to trace the finding of rich graves far from any city and discover how the merchants therein were murdered.

The story will be told in the National Geographic Society book "People and Places of the Past," to be published later this month.

THE GRAVES OF A GROUP of Babylonian merchants were massacred around 1350 B.C.E. Buried with them were a wealth of material, including imported Cypriot and Mycenaean pottery, seals from all corners of the ancient Near East, a series of weights, representing all weight systems, mirrors, tridents, jewelry, and 70 weapons.

It was clear that the graves near Akko were the second burial place. The bodies were so deteriorated and there were so many missing parts, that it was impossible to determine how they had been killed.

DR. GITTLEN DETERMINED that the date of the murders coincided with the Amarna Letters discovered about 100 years ago, dating to about the same period. In one of them, the King of Babylon catigates Akhenaten, of Egypt, for allowing his vassal, the King of Akko, to rob and murder the merchants of the King of Babylon, and demands that Akhenaten rectify the crime.

"It is not often," Dr. Gittlen wrote, in The Baltimore Jewish Times, "that an anonymous archaeological find can be correlated with concrete events mentioned in a written document."

DR. GITTLEN HAS BEEN INVOLVED in archaeological work for 16 years. He is associate professor of biblical and archeological studies at the Baltimore Hebrew College, consultant for the National Geographic Society and lecturer at the Smithsonian Institution.

The Captain Of The U.S.S. Santa Barbara

When the U.S. Sixth Fleet ammunition supply ship, the USS Santa Barbara, made port at Haifa and the captain greeted Mayor Arye Gurel with "Shalom Aleichem" the fact became known that Commander Richard Sloane came close to attending a yeshiva. His father had intended him to do so, but he joined the navy instead. Now living in Charleston, S.C., Sloane planted his second tree in Israel on Tu B'Shvat. He said the U.S. Navy looks after its Jewish personnel very well, and had already received his seder kit for Passover, although he failed to tell reporters that this came from the Jewish Welfare Board. He said he and the three other Jews on the ship hold Friday night services.

Dr. Jarvik Inventor Of The Year

Named Inventor of the Year is Dr. Robert Jarvik, the Jewish developer of the plastic heart that has kept dentist Barney Clark alive for going into the third month. Dr. Jarvik, who was bar mitzvah by Rabbi Samuel Silver at Temple Sinai in Stamford, Ct. years ago, received a plaque and $1000 at the National Inventors Hall of Fame in Washington. At a news conference Dr. Jarvik expressed the hope that in six to 10 years artificial hearts would be commonplace and power units would allow recipients to work and play. "I see no reason," he said, "why someone with one of these hearts could not ride a bicycle." It is reported that Dr. Jarvik has received $10,000 from Der Stern, West German news magazine, for the rights to his story.

Why The Ambassador Was Absent

When U.S. Ambassador Samuel Lewis failed to show up for the day-long dialogue between Israel and the United States on the relations between the two countries in which Abba Eban, Yosef Rom and Simcha Dinitz were to present Israel's views, it turned out that he had to cancel his appearance. What was the reason? He was called away at the last minute on urgent business concerning — what else — U.S.-Israel relations.

Practically the only point on which the three Israelis agreed was that there is now a crisis, or at best a severe strain, in Israel's relations with the U.S. Perhaps predictably, Rom pinned the blame for the current undesirable state of affairs on the alleged U.S. departure from the Camp David agreements, while Eban and Dinitz drove home the message that it was the policies of the Likud government that were creating a yawning gulf between Israel and the Americans.

The Mayor Will Go To Lebanon

Mayor Koch is not going to be denied the opportunity to visit Lebanon on his current trip to Israel. The New York mayor will defy a State Department policy forbidding entry to Lebanon from Israel. Missions of the Israel Bond Organization and the United Jewish Appeal have all gone into Lebanon without any restraint. I'm never going to violate the law," he said. "But that doesn't mean I'm not going to violate State Department policy. That's not law."

The Candidate

He was a member of the American Nazi Party for a year in 1971 before dropping out and now Daniel J. Harcourt aspires to become a city councilman in St. Petersburg, Fl. "I believe from the bottom of my heart in the human dignity of the individual," he said after Rev. Bernard Stanton of the Meadowlawn Church said Harcourt's campaign had connections with the Nazi party. Harcourt said he resigned from the party because he disagreed with its policy of white supremacy.

Movie Of Timerman's Book

While the name Jacobo Timerman is almost anathema these days in the American Jewish community because of his "ungrateful" criticism of Israel, a television movie of his book, Prisoner Without A Name, Cell Without A Number, is being made by NBC. By coincidence the producer is Linda Yellen, who made Playing For Time which starred Vanessa

Redgrave. The movie of Timerman's incarceration by Argentina stars Liv Ullman, who will play the role of Mrs. Timerman, while Roy Scheider, who looks like anything but the bulging Timerman, will portray him. When Scheider told Timerman he was to take the leading role, the former publisher of Argentina's leading daily said, "Roy, forget it. Just play what the story is all about. If the human rights message is there, that's the important thing."

15th Yahrzeit For Paula

In the tribute to his grandmother on the occasion of the 15th yahrzeit, Yariv Ben-Eliezer said she kept Ben-Gurion's feet on the ground. The memorial to Paula Ben-Gurion was held at the Jaffa community center which bears her name. Ben-Eliezer's reading of letters from his grandfather, David Ben-Gurion, to Paula was a touching highlight of the ceremonies. Pundits saw a subtle hint to Ofra Navon when President Navon, who had been Ben-Gurion's aide, who spoke on the occasion, said he had once been sent by his boss to Rahel Yanait Be-Zvi, who then was Israel's First Lady to caution her that there "is no constitutional position for the First Lady," and therefore she should not be making political speeches.

Begin's Popularity Declines

The latest poll on the standing of Israel's leadership, made since the report of the Investigative Commission, shows Prime Minister Begin dropping a steep 10 percent in the last past six months, but pollsters said the time lapse was too short for the sampling to really show the effect of the panel's findings. The question was on who Israelis consider the best equipped to lead the nation. Even with the precipitate drop, Begin was far ahead of his closest competitor, President Yitzhak Navon, whose popularity rose from 4.4 last August to 22.9 in this poll.

Amy Starts Out Well

Alcott

Amy Alcott launched the 1983 season with pocketing $5,888 in the first women's tournament of the year, finishing in a tie for fourth place. Were it not for a 78 on her first round, she could have finished higher up. Her last three rounds were 67, 70 and 69.

Blum To Court Of St. James

Rumor circulating in Jerusalem will have Professor Yehuda Blum, Israel's UN Ambassador, named the new ambassador to London, succeeding Shlomo Argov, who was felled by a PLO assassination attempt which has left him partly paralyzed. Replacing Blum would be Meir Rosenne, Ambassador to France. Rosenne is a former legal advisor to the Foreign Ministry.

Even In Sports

Soviet vindictiveness against Jews who seek to emigrate has cost Anna Aksharumova the Soviet women's chess title. Ms. Aksharumova accused officials of deliberately denying her the title to avoid embarrassment of a refusnik as the best player in the USSR. A ruling by the officials in the final match gave the title to her opponent. Ms Aksharumova and her husband, Boris Gulko, a Soviet grandmaster, have been trying to secure a visa for four years.

The Social Calendar

By JEAN HERSCHAF

The Lexington Avenue 92 Street Y has been running a fabulous series under the title "Retribalization of the Jews." Perhaps its most successful lecture, a standing room only affair that turned away dozens of last minute attendees, featured Paul Cowan, author of "An Orphan in History: Retrieving a Jewish Legacy" and Anne Roiphe, author of Generation Without Memory: A Jewish Journey in Christian America. John Ruskay, a Reconstructionist, active Jew heads the professional educational staff at the "Y" and opened the session.

In essence it was about being Jewish in this day and age, a struggle with modernity, personal identity from two prominent young writers. Cowan, a journalist for the Village Voice, and Ms. Roiphe, a journalist and author whose book "Up the Sandbox" became a Hollywood film less than a decade ago. She was the gal whose piece in the New York Times some years ago about celebrating Christmas as a Jew raised a storm of protest of letters-to-the-editor.

Both gave a rundown of their past alienated from the Jewishness both never enjoyed while young while growing up with parents born Jewish but who ignored the beauty of Jewish life for the seduction of the Christian tradition that was symbolized by celebrating Xmas with trees in the home.

Cowan noted that his father, though, at times would mention Jewish history, would take him on walks in the city and point out Jewish landmarks. But that was the full of it.

Cowan's dad was a nationally successful head of WCBS-Radio who with his wife lost their lives in a tragic fire that engulfed their penthouse apartment some years ago. It was following this tragedy that he went searching for his Jewish roots, breaking his bond with the New Left and deserting his flirtation with Christian existence.

Of the many thought-provoking statements the now Orthodox Jew made was: "It wasn't G-d that killed my parents, it was a fire that started in the TV set. It wasn't G-d that was responsible for the Holocaust it was an evil man, Hitler, and others like him..." in defense of unswerving full committed faith. His wife, Rachel, converted to Judaism and is an observant Jew as well, he noted.

"Israel is not a synagogue. American Jews have a right to express dissent on her policies," he replied in answer to my query made from the crowded floor, "Do you support most traditional Jews who are opposed to American Jewish dissent on Israeli policies?"

At the same time and reply, however, Cowan stressed that American Jews as all Americans, should not be quick to form opinions before they have all the facts. The media has been and is biased against Israel. He also requested that in reference to the massacre in the Lebanese camps, Jews await the Israeli Commission report.

Anne Roiphe had a similar reply. Dissent should be free to all but cautioned that sufficient facts be at hand to make judgment.

Ms. Roiphe though, has not found her full journey to Judaism as Cowan has, she admitted. "I'm still learning and it will take time." She rejected the premise though, raised from the floor, if she believed the Jews were a chosen people.

"After the Holocaust, I can't believe that," she finalized. She was candid in revealing her constant struggle as a committed feminist that makes acceptance of Jewish dogma conflicting. "I would be dishonest to brush over this," she said.

To her and her family, the most meaningful aspect to date has been the ritual of the celebration of the Sabbath, of the Passover, of all the holidays. "These warm and sustain the Jew," she said. She was robbed of this in her younger days, in her family life which, like Cowan's, celebrated Xmas with gifts exchanged.

She said the best way to become a committed Jew is to be invited to Jewish homes that radiate the spirit. She told of being the guest of Rabbi Irving and Blu Greenberg on many occasions, when observance of the Shabbat and of Jewish holidays seemed for her to bind Jews together with yesterday. She replied to a question, "What was the most negative aspect of Judaism for her?" "The constant judgments — Jews don't do this, Jews don't do that...and on and on..." That turn-off still remains for her. "That's Judaism by fear..." she pronounced.

At the conclusion, noted writer, Cynthia Ozick, replied to my question "Your assessment of the program, please." "It was too complex an issue to be solved in one program."

A grandmother in attendance later told me "I liked Roiphe's suggestion that 'secular Jew' not be used perjoratively by the more observant Jews." Another, a college co-ed told me, "I liked Anne's denunciation of Hillel's definition of being a Jew. She is right 'it's too simplistic' to boil down to one sentence."

Another interested observer was Irving Bernstein, top

Jews By Choice

Remarks Jews Of Choice Hear

By SAMANTHA LINDBLAD

I recently received a letter from a young man by the name of James who converted to Judaism over three years ago. He had read my column in which I described a friend who made anti-Semitic remarks. In his letter he wrote, "Boy, can I relate to that one."

He went on to describe a number of his own experiences, the worst being when he attended a recent family get-together and was greeted with a "Heil Hitler" salute from his brother-in-law. His reason for writing was to assure me that I was not alone when it came to such encounters and I know there must be many others who also face such situations.

LIKE JAMES, I USUALLY come up with eloquent and meaningful prose to put such people in their place... well after the event. At the time, however, such a thing lives you so speechless and dumbfounded that your mind becomes a complete blank as to how to respond.

What always flashes through my mind is "how could they say such a thing?" I would no more think of making a crude crack, about say the celibacy of the priesthood or the infallibility of the Pope to my Catholic friends than I'd fly. But my Catholic friends, and others, seem to feel no compunction about making offending remarks to me.

THE COMMENTS THAT CROP up most often usually have to do with money. Everyone knows that all Jews are rich, hoard money, and are stingy. "You'll never see a Jew standing in line for welfare checks. They have their chauffeurs do it for them." Now that may be a stupid statement but I've heard people use it, and underlying the humor of it is the fact that they really believe it.

As for this Jew, when people learn that my family and I live in a home that was built in 1926, in an area that provides no electricity, gas, or running water (unless I'm especially energetic that day) they're stunned. Finding out I'm also a writer seems to relieve their mind some, since everyone knows writers are "unusual", but their expressions continue to betray a suspicion that there still must be a couple of shoe boxes of money buried somewhere.

ANOTHER COMMENT concerning money, and one that irritates me to no end, is that the only person anyone ever remembers having cheated them out of money was a Jew. Their names usually being Rosenberg or Goldstein. I don't know about you but I'd like to find these two guys, sit them down, and have a little talk with them about giving the rest of us such a lousy reputation.

Those same old time-worn cliches have followed us through countless years and been adopted by each new generation without a thought to ever finding out whether they are really true or not. To me, it's incredible that after nearly 2,000 years the vast majority of people are still ignorant as to just what and who we really are.

AS TO WHY PEOPLE WILL MAKE such remarks to a Jewish friend I have no answer. I can only say, as James said to me, that I'd like to give you some advice, or something to say to such "friends" and I would if I knew what to say to mine.

Winds Of War Disappoints

By RABBI ELLIOT GERTEL

Heralded as the longest and most expensive TV movie in history, The Winds of War was a long and expensive disappointment.

Many, I am sure, watched it out of a sense of obligation — out of sympathy for all the effort and expense, out of loyalty to war memories, or out of a sense of ignorance of the World War II era. It made us feel educated, but also made us look at the clock, as one is prone to do even during the best classroom experiences.

SOME THINGS were very wrong with The Winds of War. First, it was too long. A painless history lesson made for a drawn-out drama. Half-documentary, half-drama, it succeeded at neither; in following the adventures of the main character (played by Robert Mitchum), we learned more about Hitler, Roosevelt, Mussolini and Stalin than about the main character.

Secondly, despite the inordinate length of the film, its sequences were too short to be moving or to give any real understanding of what the drama attempted to reconstruct at great expense. The film promised, for example, to recreate the shtetl, lost to the world after the Holocaust. But a brief wedding scene hardly communicates the full extent of shtetl life, and an escape from the shtetl scene which involves the entire village is reminiscent of a dozen World War II pictures about a dozen peoples, thereby failing to relate the unique Jewish horrors of the era.

WHEN THE FILM is most moving — scenes showing Nazi slaughter of Jewish men, women and children and the reenactment of the bombing of Pearl Harbor — it is the horror of the events themselves, and not the power of the script or direction, that moves us.

So out of control is this film, that it doesn't seem to focus on what is most moving. More powerful even than the scenes in which Jews are shot (either because TV has made us immune to violence, or because the scenes lacked dramatic impact, or both) were the scenes involving a German Jewish industrialist, Rosenthal, who is forced to rent his palatial home for a pittance to American diplomats, or to lose it entirely.

THE SCENES involving the day-to-day brutalities of the Nazis — from house renting to ruthless foreclosures to passport inspections — are most effective. In certain sequences, the film is effective at enabling the viewer to understand the Jews' reluctance to believe that things would remain so bad. But one suspects that Winds of War remained so out of focus and out of control — so out of touch with its own strengths and weaknesses — precisely because it was too long.

Winds of War failed, thirdly, because the story was just too contrived, too neat. The main character happens to visit every major world figure of World War II, sometimes even bringing along the wife and kids. Every loose end is taken care of at the last minute: adultery never gets out of hand, the main characters are never seriously injured, President Roosevelt is always on hand to do a favor. Even when the major love interests, Jewish Natalie Jastrow and Navy prodigal Byron Henry are caught in Poland during the Nazi invasion, their experience seems more like an old serial adventure than like an exploration of the depths of Nazi evil.

Worse yet, and fourth among the reasons for the failure of this film is that there is not one performance that can be called significant. While no actor really botched it all up, no one really caused a sensation, either. The protagonists were so type-cast, anyway, that they seemed to parody their own past roles. Only Victoria Tennant (as Pamela), a British actress who should have been around for the stylish war pictures of the Forties, and Jeremy Kemp as Von Roon, made a lasting mark. Tennant will become a great star.

DESPITE its great length, Winds of War leaves the viewer with the impression that it

Time To Collect Your Passover Recipes

By SARAH LIEBER

When Purim is over, it's time to start collecting recipes and ideas for the lovely spring celebration of our liberation from slavery, Passover. I'd suggest my readers collect and paste into a notebook, or other more or less permanent place, any new recipes or variations on old favorites. Below are a few to start that collection.

Sarah

KNISHLACH

1 medium onion, diced or minced
3 tbsps parve margarine or schmaltz
½ pound liver, calf's or chicken, broiled and ground or chopped
3 cups (3 large) potatoes, cooked and mashed
2 eggs, slightly beaten
2 tbsps schmaltz or parve margarine
salt and pepper to taste
6 tbsps matzo meal

1 egg yolk, beaten with 1 tbsps of water

Saute onion in 3 tablespoons of the fat. Combine with the liver, season to taste. Combine mashed potatoes with eggs, two tablespoons fat and matzo meal. Form into walnut sized dough balls. Make a depression in the center of each and fill with liver mixture. Brush with the yolk and water mixture. Place on a well-greased baking sheet; bake at 400 degrees 20 minutes or until well browned. Good hot! Makes about 3½ dozen.

SPRING VEGETABLE SOUP

2 medium potatoes, peeled
1 small zucchini, peeled
2 large carrots, scraped or peeled
1 small onion
3 scallions
2 ribs celery
3 tbsps parve margarine, or schmaltz
2 cans (10½-ounces each) kosher Pesach chicken broth
2 soup cans water
1 tsp sugar

Dice all vegetables. In large saucepan, saute the vegetables in the fat for a few minutes to tenderize. Add condensed soup, water and sugar. Simmer over low heat 20 to 30 minutes or until vegetables are tender. (Sarah's note: you may add any other seasonable vegetables such as tomato, and/or frozen vegetables, if pesachdig. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Serves 6.

FLUFFY MATZO BALLS

3 eggs, separated
¾ cup matzo meal or cake meal
pinch of salt, if desired
pinch of ginger, if desired
1 tbsps seltzer or gingerale

Beat egg whites until stiff; fold in yolks, beaten with salt and ginger. Fold in matzo meal, alternating with liquid; form into small or medium sized balls. Chill or freeze overnight, if possible. When ready to use, drop into boiling soup, or boiling water. (Hint from a reader, many years ago: for a novel idea, put matzo mixture in plastic ice cube trays, and remove carefully before dropping into the soup. If you are serving smaller amounts of soup, in this way it is not necessary to use all the matzo balls at once.)

BEEF IN RED WINE

2 pounds lean, boneless chuck or other cut, cubed to 2 to 3-inches
1 cup medium dry Concord wine
½ cup matzo meal or cake meal
½ tsp salt
pinch of pepper
¼ cup oil or vegetable shortening
1½ cups boiling water or broth
4 carrots, peeled and sliced
1 cup small white onions, peeled
½ cup dried apricots or other dried fruit, soaked and drained

Place meat in bowl; pour wine over it and marinate several hours or overnight in the refrigerator. Drain; reserving marinade. Roll the meat in a mixture of the meal, salt and pepper. In a Dutch oven or other large, heavy pot with lid, brown the meat in hot fat. Stir in boiling liquid and half the wine. Cover tightly; simmer over low heat 2 hours or until tender. Add remaining wine, carrots, onions and fruit. Simmer until very tender and well heated. Gravy may be thickened with a little cake meal, stirred into the fluid. Serves 6.

MATZO-MEAL OMELET

6 eggs
½ tsp salt
dash pepper
¾ cup water
¾ cup matzo meal, or cake meal
3 tbsps butter or parve margarine
preserves, honey or jam, optional

Beat eggs until yolks and whites are well combined, or beat separately, then carefully folding whites into yolks. Add seasonings, water and meal. Heat butter or margarine in a large skillet or omelet pan; add egg mixture. Cook over low heat without stirring; lifting with a spatula frequently to allow uncooked egg to flow underneath. When browned on bottom, and firm throughout, make a 2-inch cut on each side, where it will be folded. Using a broad spatula or egg-turner, gently slide onto serving platter; spread with preserves or other garnish, if desired. Serve at once. Serves 4 to 6.

Where Is Neo-Nazi J.B. Stoner?

By ARLENE G. PECK

I love it!

J. B. Stoner is a fugitive.

For those of you who don't know who he is, Stoner is also the chairman of the National States Rights Party. It is a Neo-Nazi Party which almost makes the Ku Klux Klan look liberal. Their national headquarters is located right near Atlanta. Other than bombing black churches, passing out hate literature at schools and running around wearing swastikas, they also publish a hate newspaper called The Thunderbolt.

SEVERAL MONTHS AGO I answered an advertisement by Stoner, which was published in the Atlanta Journal for a complimentary copy. Ever since I have been receiving a copy of this racist hate newspaper which is mailed in a plain, brown, sealed envelope. I imagine that it's sent to me in such a way because some people are ashamed to be receiving obscene material through the mails. Page after page of hate-filled filth is published by this man who at this writing is desperately trying to avoid being sent to jail.

Stoner failed to show up to begin serving a sentence for his conviction in the bombing of a black church in Birmingham, Ala. As a result, a judge rejected his bond extension appeal, declared his $20,000 bond forfeited and issued an arrest warrant. After Stoner was discovered missing, the bail bondsman, Sonny Livingston, said, "I believe J. B. is in fear for his life, but he's no dummy. He knows that he can't run."

WELL, be that as it may, J. B. Stoner is nowhere to be seen. He has said many times that he fears being killed by black inmates if sent to prison in Alabama. Frankly, it couldn't happen to a more deserving guy. The Alabama authorities have stated that they are preparing a "proper welcome" for fugitive J. B. Stoner. He will be in a one-man cell located across from another convicted bomber who was sent to prison for the 1963 bombing of the 16th Street Baptist Church in Birmingham. Think of all the wonderful hours they could spend reminiscing between cells of their evil doings.

When Charles Whittenstein, the civil rights director of the Anti-Defamation League, was contacted, he said that he believed that Stoner might have taken refuge with fellow believers in white supremacy. "He might have gone to any one of a number of those paramilitary camps which are over the country," Stu Lewengrub, the ADL Southeastern director continued, "He would receive sanctuary in any one of those places or even in Europe where a number of neo-Nazi groups might give him refuge."

THAT'S WHAT frightens

me about this evil, distorted man. He does have sympathizers who think as he does and would harbor him. I was astounded to note a couple of years ago when Stoner ran for Governor of Georgia how many thousands of votes that he received. However, not all of his neighbors in the largely redneck area in which Stoner resides feels as he does. One man who asked that his name not be used because he feared retaliation by the White Supremist Party, said he was not surprised when Stoner did not show up in court. He speculated that a year's worth of excavation behind the headquarters may have been advance preparation for Stoner's current status as fugitive.

Others said they were just as glad that Stoner was out of the neighborhood. "We came here from California a year ago and when we found out we were moving into the same neighborhood as Stoner, we couldn't believe it." Said a former schoolteacher, "I can't believe in this day and age that he still exists." Unfortunately, in this day and age, the Stoners of the world exist, bigger than ever.

STATE REP. Tyrone Brooks issued an appeal to Stoner to turn himself in to the Registrative Black Caucus. In return, Brooks said, he would ask that Stoner be given a state police escort to Birmingham. Brooks said he would appear before the court there and ask that Stoner be con-

UJA executive who rose to query about pluralism in Israel or the need for it.

At the coffee hour following, Cowan introduced me to Rachel Cowan, his wife. They are both active members of Conservative Anshe Chesed Synagogue which has a rotating staff of rabbis that includes Dr. Seymour Siegel, who now heads the Federal Holocaust Commission in Washington. Cowan also belongs to the Chavershaft group that meets Shabbat afternoons on New York's West Side with leading Conservative scholars, including the widow of Dr. A. J. Heschel, discussing issues of the day.

Cowan is a winning young man with an infectious smile.

He was still somewhat upset by an unfair attack on him by a Letters-to-editor column in a leading anglo-Jewish weekly which accused him wrongly of authoring an anti-Israel piece in the Village Voice. He told the audience "I did not write it and I am blushing red that people will assume the letter was accurate."

An Occasional Column — Winds Of War

is incomplete. This fifth fault is serious. Ending the story at Pearl Harbor suggests that ABC is out to make a sequel (anything for the ratings game!) and that the main characters are still undergoing major experiences and changes somewhere off camera — disconcerting thoughts to the viewer who wonders why he invested so many hours in a story without an ending. Unfinished symphonies never ran this long or left the impression of being unfinished business, as this film does. ABC's best series to date, Roots, had a sequel, but one felt that the first part was a finished product, especially since the sequel dealt with subsequent generations.

Worst of all and finally, Winds of War blows hot air from both directions. It sends out dangerously conflicting signals. These are, I dare say, conflicts created by Herman Wouk himself, since he had more control over this screen play than most novelists. On the one hand, he purports to advocate Jewish survival by showing that a baptized professor still feels like a Jew and wrote a book with a Jewish perspective of Jesus. On the other hand, the only Jews in the film who are really interested in survival are forced from their homes, and only Jews married to Gentiles get the protection they need. This is no role model of creative and self-determined Jewish survival in this film.

It shows only Jews who are afraid to admit they are Jews, thus pointing to the effects of hatred and discrimination on the Jew, but reducing the Jew to a cowering curiosity, functioning only as the perennial victim of name-calling, discrimination and violence. At this stage of the drama, Winds of War closed without the slightest affirmation of the positive side of being a Jew which Wouk expressed so eloquently and so enduringly in This Is My Gd.

Israeli Seminar Sees Peace As On The Way

By SAMSON KRUPNICK

To the overwhelming majority of Jews, even to most Israelis, the Arab constitutes a puzzling enigma. What is he really like? What does he think of Jews, deep down? Does he in fact wish to destroy us? Does he have no desire for peace?

Regrettably, no one has authentic answers to these questions. There is much wishful thinking, but real factual information is lacking woefully. To fill in the gap on Jewish Arab relations there was held recently an in depth symposium on the provocative topic, "The Arab World and Its Attitude to the State of Israel - Image and Reality."

IT WAS sponsored jointly by the Shiloah Center for Middle Eastern and African Studies of Tel Aviv University and "Davar", the Histadrut daily, in honor of the dean of journalists and authors on Arab affairs, 87-year-old Michael Assaf, winner of the Sokolow Prize for Journalism. Warm greetings were extended to Michael Assaf by his dear friend of long standing, President Itzhak Navon, who hailed Assaf as a trailblazer in shedding light on the true nature of the Arabs, teaching generations since 1927 to respect their Arab neighbors, their traditions, their history and their aspirations.

Davar's knowledgeable editor Hanna Zemer was the moderator, providing the background in true journalistic style by emphasizing that while reporters covering a fire or writing up an accident or crime go right to the scene of the event or get first hand information on the spot, on Arab affairs, such reporting is almost impossible, the sources being usually third hand, making a true assessment most difficult. TAU Rector, Professor Yoram Dinstein, enlarged on this theme, indicating the traps in which we may be caught in going to extremes regarding attitudes on Arabs, either demonological or omnipotents, or incompetents. He praised the balanced presentation by Assaf all these many years.

THE BASIC factual analysis was made in comprehensive fashion by Israel's Ambassador to Egypt, Moshe Sasson, who brought our diplomatic position in the Arab world into sharp focus when he emphasized, albeit subtly, that he is Israel's only Ambassador in the entire world who can come home from his post "on dry land", which he does regularly just as did Patriarch Abraham on the same route 3700 years ago. The Ambassador recalled his early years at his post in Turkey, and wondered then at the phenomenon that the zindustrial Revolution that had changed the western world had been stopped dead in its tracks at the boundaries of Islam.

He theorized that the society in Arab lands is much slower in moving from idealization and overimagination to reality and pragmatism. Notwithstanding this attitude, the sudden plunge into pragmatism as a political policy by Anwar Sadat in 1977 was really not the first practical move by Arabs for peace with Israel, albeit the most dramatic. Even this first peace with an Arab nation in comparing the idyllic dream of "peace forever" as vowed by Sadat and later by Mubarak, the reality falls far short of the high expectations.

minded us that the 1949 Armistice Agreement had set a goal of peace. He recalled a meeting with Reuven Shiloah and Jordan's King Abdullah in 1951 when Abdullah had stated bluntly, "If we don't come to a peace agreement there will be one war after another and the Arabs will lose all of them. We need peace more than do you." In 1950 Eliyahu Sasson held peace negotiations with Egyptian leaders, yet it took four wars and 29 years before pragmatism broke through. He commented, "Thirty years ago Arab leaders wanted peace but their peoples opposed it. Today it is the opposite. The Arab peoples want peace while their leaders are the reluctant ones."

Today, however, peace has a much better chance because of a number of factors: the proven strength of the IDF and the Arab conclusion that a decisive military victory over Israel is remote; the weariness of Arabs with continued battling; and the fact that peace with Egypt has held fast and its many benefits have been a striking example to other Arab countries.

POLITICAL SCIENCE Professor Gavriel Ben Dor, of Haifa University and Shiloah, analyzed typical Arab attitudes toward Jews, including arab eschatology with Jews as the scapegoats or Arab demonology regarding Jews and their persistence in maintaining these "ideological" images in place of realities. He concluded, however, that for the Arabs peace with Israel is not a top urgency as compared with inter-Arab relations and Arab-Western world relations.

As to peace prospects for the near future Professor Ben Dor felt that as long as weak countries such as Jordan and Lebanon fear the reactions of other Arab nations, peace is distant. when Arab countries will realize that there is truly no one "Arab World" but rather each country in the area on a territorial basis, then Israel too will be accepted as a territorial entity.

SHILOAH CENTER Director, Professor Itamar Rabinowitz, outlined three phases of a continuing peace process: The post 1949 Armistice Agreement; contacts with Arabs after the Six Day War of 1967; and the progress after the 1973 Yom Kippur War. He noted that the contact process is developing and should bear fruit in time, particularly the firm relations with the Maronite Christians in Lebanon. The overall consensus in the symposium appeared to be that pragmatism is gradually winning the battle for peace in our area, but the process will be a long drawn-out affair.

Honors

Miami Beach will pay tribute to Rabbi Irving Lehrman on the occasion of his 40th year in the pulpit at Temple Emanu-El, which has become an American legend as seats at Sabbath services are apportioned by ticket only so dense is the attendance. A $150-a-couple tribute will take the form of a black tie dinner to provide scholarship assistance for more than half of the students of the Lehrman Day School named in honor of Dr. Lehrman 15 years ago during the celebration of his 25th anniversary as rabbi of the congregation.

New York's West Side Institutional Synagogue will honor Rabbi O. Ashe Reichel and Mrs. Reichel on the occasion of his 36th (double chai) year in the pulpit, and the same double chair of their marriage at a banquet March 6 at the Essex House.

Quotation Of The Week

Those of you who attended the joint service which we had at Temple B'rith Kodesh last month witnessed an historic event. If you missed it, no doubt you read about it in the newspapers; but the papers did not adequately note the significance of what was going on. So I will tell you.

Bishop Matthew Clark apologized for the persecutions of our people and the anti-Semitism perpetrated upon us by the Roman Catholic Church throughout our common history. I do not know if this was the very first time that a bishop of the Roman Catholic Church has so apologized publicly or not; but it is certainly one of the very few times that this has occurred these last 1900 years.

In recent years the Roman Catholic Church has been the leader within the Christian world in beginning to begin to change Christianity's age-old, anti-Semitic teachings. The Second Vatican Council issued an encyclical called Nostra Aetate in 1965. This statement reevaluates Judaism in a very positive light and is a revolutionary departure from Christianity's traditional view that Judaism no longer has any validity as a means to salvation.

Yet it is a long way to go from reevaluating Judaism on a theoretical level to publicly apologizing for the practical realities that came out of that theory. Frankly, I never expected to see the day in my lifetime that a leader in a major Christian denomination would publicly apologize for his/her church's anti-Semitic history. Bishop Clark's words were a very great, very small first step.

For this, a recital of "Shehecheyanu" is appropriate. — Rabbi William Blank, Temple Emanu-El of Irondequoit, Rochester, N.Y.

A Touch Of Humility

By RABBI MAURICE DAVIS

We are the most powerful people the world has ever known. Is there anything we cannot do? Our ships sail the seas. Our satellites circle the earth. Our space ships visit the stars and the Planets.

We make Davis machinery beyond belief. We divide time into a billionth of a second, and, impatient at the delay, we now divide time into a thousandth of a billionth of a second.

We have missiles and explosives sufficient to destroy mankind eight times over, and are now "improving" our weaponry to do it 12 times over. We call it defense!

In terms of personal luxury we live in houses that would make our ancestors rediscover magic. They would look at our magnificence, our toys and our gadgets and they would simply refuse to believe such things could be.

We have computers that answer questions our ancestors could not even ask, and our children belong to a world we need a pass to enter.

We have automobiles that practically drive themselves. They speak to us, reminding us to close the door, turn off the lights, and get some gas.

We have conquered our environment, controlled the elements, and pushed back the boundaries of the unknown.

And just when we begin to believe our own commercials, and all the lies we tell ourselves about ourselves, nature drops 18 inches of snow and a dozen states are paralyzed.

Eighteen inches and all the fancy automobiles with their hundreds of horsepower under the hoods are stranded along the highways.

2 Jewish Women In Latin America

By RABBI SAMUEL SILVER

Two Latin American Jewish women have something in common: each is married to an important public official. But there the resemblance stops, we are told by Chaim Lazdaisky, who covers Mexico for the Algemeiner Journal.

The wife of Mexico's Foreign Minister Jorge Constantino (he is her second husband) is a leftist, and so is her husband. She is not sympathetic to Israel, nor is her husband, though he diplomatically remains neutral. She has a son, Andy Rosenthal, from her first husband. He's in the Mexican diplomatic corps and he too tilts away from Israel.

On the other hand, Mrs. Louis Alberta Monge, nee Ankelovitch, the wife of the president of Costa Rica is, the reporter avers, "a hartzige Yiddishe froe," i.e. warmly Jewish, and she has most likely been a factor in the decision of her husband to move the Costa Rican embassy back to Jerusalem and to exhibit great sympathy for Israel and great interest in Jewish causes and individuals.

The Kuznetsovs

For years Sylvia Zalmanson was the symbol of the victim of Russian harshness. After being jailed by the Russians for trying to escape, she was freed. But her husband, Edward Kuznetsov was not liberated. She traveled throughout the world protesting his treatment. Finally, the protests prevailed, and Edward was allowed to leave the country. The happy couple were reunited and went to Israel to live. They had a baby daughter, now two. But, alas, their love evaporated and recently they were divorced.

When the Algemeiner Journal's Israel Kvutza asked Sylvia what had happened, she said that her husband's long imprisonment made it impossible for him to live a normal domestic life. They have separated but have promised to remain friends.

The New Forward

Issue of No. 30,3888 of the

A Touch Of Humility

(Continued From Prev. Page) Saturday our city was closed up completely. No one could go anywhere. No one could return. We were covered with snow...and a touch of humility. We are not apart from nat-

Forward was an historically melancholy one: the first since the paper went weekly, after more than 85 years of being a daily.

The issue contained 72 pages, 36 in Yiddish and 36 in English. All of the writers are represented, and hereafter, it was pointed out, editorials will be by-lined. The editors beg the readers to react to the new form of the paper and to get more subscribers, else the very life of the paper is in jeopardy.

The Forward's man in London reports that there will soon be a Sigmund Freud museum in the British city thanks to a bequest from Anna Freud, his daughter, who recently died and left memorabilia to be displayed. Dr. S. Levenberg also recalls that Dr. Freud had good relationships with various Jewish organizations during his last days in London. His grandson, however, Clement Freud, a member of Parliament, once asked the Jewish Chronicle to stop listing him as a Jew.

A Win And A Loss

The cause of Yiddish had a setback when the Forward had to cease being a daily to become a weekly. But it had a victory in Israel where Bar-Ilan University announced the inauguration of a department of Yiddish which will even be more satisfying to lovers of mame lashon than the one at Hebrew U. because at the latter school it's taught Hebrew to Yiddish whereas at Bar-Ilan it'll be Yiddish to Yiddish. (Algemeiner Journal).

Abraham Goldfaden

Back in 1908 a Jewish funeral attracted some 25,000 people and the event was hailed in the Times and the World as spectacular. The deceased was Abraham Goldfaden, known as the father of the Yiddish theater. The World told its readers that he was the "Jewish Shakespeare."

On the occasion of the 75th yahrzeit of the famous playwright, the Forward's Chanah Motek reprints some of his poems and a chunk of his autobiography in which he apologizes for pandering to audiences with light plays instead of more serious works he would prefer to write. But, Goldfaden wrote, quoting the Passover Haggadah, "slaves we were," i.e. slaves of the popular fancy.

Goldfaden also thanked the Forward in a letter to the editor for urging producers on Second Avenue to pay up the royalties on which they often welshed. Goldfaden's many plays did include some serious ones; one of his musicals, Shulamit, recently enjoyed a well-patronized revival. Another of his plays was bought by the famous Jacob Adler, who decided not to use it and then sold it to his counterpart, the famous Boris Thomashefsky.

The Lox Box

Pain Preferable

By MARTIN MOSKOVITZ

The other week I stayed home one day on account of having a tooth pulled. For lack of something better to do in the meantime, I turned to the greatest home entertainment medium of the century — the TV — in order to be amused and to forget my aching gums.

Moskovitz

Unfortunately, I watched a soap opera, because at that time of day, TV viewers had no choice. I watched a doctor's wife commit suicide when she finds out her husband is in love with three other women simultaneously. In fact, he has already made two of them pregnant.

I was really surprised that a doctor shouldn't know about birth control procedures.

Then the evening news came on and there was Casper Weinberger. And after the news they announced the winning state lottery number. It was 769. I had 768.

So finally, in the interest of personal happiness, I turned off the TV and contemplated my aching gums instead. And all I can say, is that if anyone isn't depressed these days, they ought to have their television sets examined.

The EDITOR'S CHAIR

We were privileged once again this year to sit in on the national executive committee meeting of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith. The proceedings are off the record, so we can only give you some insights rather than report the developments. We appreciate the invitation to executive committee sessions since this gives us a better understanding of how our national organizations operate. At one time, we had the same privilege with the executive sessions of the Council of Jewish Federations, but that was in the period when we aided them in receiving the recognition that they warranted as the community council and the emerging new power in American Jewry.

If you want to know the way the leadership of American Jewry feels, you need to attend not their executive sessions but their resolution sessions. That is when not only the individuals open up their hearts and fight for their positions, but when you get the real sense of the views that do and do not dominate in American Jewry.

This time we could not attend the resolution sessions, but we did attend the Friday afternoon one where the various divisions of the ADL made their reports. It was an eye-opening event, not so much as to what was said but as to how the ADL operates and the calibre of its leadership, the lay and not so much the professional leadership.

We can report that the sessions were like a board meeting of a large corporation. No professional made a report, only the lay leaders of the various departments. They were incisive and showed in-depth insights and governed the whole spectrum of the work of the agency.

It was the lay leaders themselves who impressed us most. Like in every national Jewish organization we always wonder how these individuals who take on the responsibilities for Jewish activity devote so much time and effort to the cause, as if their very life depends on it — even in fundraising. Incidentally while we are not privileged to relate the figures of the ADL campaign, we believe we will not be violating any confidence to state that the amount raised in the current campaign is surpassingly good. At the banquet at which Alexander Haig was the principal speaker, the figure of contributions was way over the $1 million mark, and at least four of the gifts were in the amount of $100,000.

But it was in the other areas of the ADL work that showed devotion of these responsible leaders. We didn't get to meet Kenneth J. Bialkin, the national chairman, but his report of the welfare and achievements of the agency showed his grasp of the problems of American Jewry vis a vis the general community. The way he zeroed in on the heart of problems revealed the kind of mind he has.

Because of the approach of the Sabbath, we didn't get to hear more than about half of Rabbi Ronald Sobels' talk on "Religion and Power in America Today." We know most of the prominent rabbis in America, and we've known his predecessors, especially Rabbi Nathan Perlman, at Emanu-El, but we've never met him. His report deserves to be published.

Then there was our co-Indianapolis representative, Gerald Kraft. Although we've watched him make his way up the ladder in Jewish life, we've never heard him speak publicly, and this was his maiden talk to the ADL, which of course, as you know, is an affiliate of the B'nai B'rith. This was his first talk to them as B'nai B'rith president and he comes across very well.

We haven't had a chance to consult with Gerry, but we would hazard the guess that he will heal the breach between the ADL and the B'nai B'rith, which seemed up until recently developing into a schism which could see the ADL drawing away from the B'nai B'rith in view of the fact that it raises its own budget and has its own agenda, etc. etc. Gerald got a long ovation after he finished his remarks, and that carried some meaning as far as we were concerned. That he is devoting all his time and more to B'nai B'rith goes without saying.

Martin Peretz was the main speaker Friday night, and we had wanted not only to hear him, but to have a chance to chat with him. He's editor and publisher of The New Republic and he was in the van in exposing the media for its unfair treatment of Israel in Lebanon, a generic disease of the press in times of stress, especially when developments are so tumultuous and so rapid that newspapers have no time to draw away from the action and look at it dispassionately. His managing editor is married to Michele Slung, an author and book columnist for The Washington Post, and daughter of one of our closest friends, Rafael and Dorothy Slung. She is the niece of Pulitzer prize-winner, Louis Shafer, Redd's brother, the three of us alumni of the University of North Carolina. We now have played golf twice with Redd while down here — they live at Pompano Beach. We stayed at the Boca Teeca Country Club, about which we'll tell you more later.

But that night we were at services at Temple Sinai, where Rabbi Samuel Silver, our "Digest of The Yiddish Press" columnist holds sway. How in three years he has built from nothing to where already his new congregation has bought 12 acres of ground and hopes to have at least the sanctuary built by Rosh Hashonah is a story in itself, and material for a later "chair."

To finish with the ADL sessions, we heard Alexander Haig speak at the banquet, and he got to the podium at 10:10 that evening, after a long but very successful card-calling session by Maxwell Greenberg, immediate past national chairman of the ADL. We made the note that next to Sam Rothberg he excels at card-calling.

Haig surprised us with his humor and you've read elsewhere but could have predicted anyway what he had to say. In the White House he was a friend of Israel, and if anything, he is more so today. He was to be introduced by Edgar Bronfman, who is nursing some broken ribs having fallen off while horseback riding, presumably somewhere in the area.

Only a few weeks ago we wrote that nowhere in organized Jewish life today were the major banquets not kosher. The day that editorial appeared, we got a call telling us that right in our home city, Indianapolis, the federation's big gifts dinner was not kosher. Well maybe next year it and the ADL's banquet will be kosher.

We'll close this piece with telling you how pleasant it is to meet old friends who you develop as you attend national affairs. Of course there was Jack Spitzer, whom Gerald Kraft has succeeded, Daniel Thurst, executive vice president of B'nai B'rith, Burton Levinson, who'll most certainly become national chairman of the ADL (he now heads the executive committee), Nathan Perlmutter, the executive vice president, and his sidekick, Abe Foxman. Then there were the three Indianapolis couples, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Mantel, who is a member of the national executive, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Domont and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Larman, all of whom were present last year also.

Oh yes, Frank Lautenberg, the new Senator from New Jersey, was honored at the banquet. And is he an outgoing character? He overwhelms even when there are 600 couples hearing him. We can understand how he won the election. Abe Foxman introduced us to him as he passed in the hallway, he's big boned and gives off the aura of power.

We haven't mentioned Burton Joseph. He it was who walked into our office in Indianapolis four or five years ago when he was national chairman of ADL prior to Maxwell Greenberg to introduce himself. He was a subscriber. Since then we've been invited to these meetings, including the national convention, and we hope we've repaid his confidence in The P-O. He heads one of the largest grain-dealing companies in the world with fleets of barges and ocean-going vessels. We don't know if we are at liberty to tell you about one of his projects which involved an Arab

Moshe Arens

Don't be fooled.

The selection of Moshe Arens to succeed Ariel Sharon as Defense Minister is actually naming of him as successor to Prime Minister Begin. Or in fact, if one wishes to go a step backward, his selection as Ambassador of Israel to the United States was choosing him for the top post in Israel.

If only politics were used as a criterion, that would be a statement by a keen observer. But much more is involved.

Moshe Arens is so far above anyone else in the top echelon of Israel leadership that this is another one of those conjunctions in history when the man and events coincide to produce an outstanding personality.

What are his qualities, other than a superior mind and an honesty that could be his downfall? They are the aura he gives out of confidence without in the least trying to be persuasive. In other words he is himself. Anyone who has met him would never believe that he is trying to win a point by duplicity. Whether he agrees or opposes you, you know that he has spoken what he feels and thinks, and you can take it or leave it.

Like in all great moments in history, events have multiplied so that the way for him has been opened almost like the parting of the Red Sea. Israel is fortunate therefore, but not only Israel, the West and even the Arabs will profit from his stewardship when that time arrives, probably sooner than most think.

Explanation Required

An explanation is warranted of exactly what it is that the Orthodox mean when they mount a campaign (P-O, Feb. 9) against recognition of the non-Orthodox in Israel.

It is one thing to challenge non-Orthodox movements in the United States, but to do so in Israel is something else again.

We do not know how the Conservative kibbutz that is being organized will comport itself as far as Orthodox concepts are concerned, but we do have experience as far as the Reform kibbutz, Yahel, in the Arava in Israel. There Torah is studied. There decisions on Jewish law are made after thorough and involved consideration of halacha, and of course kashruth and the Shabbat are observed minutely to the acceptance of even the most stringent Orthodox practice. When an issue of observance is concerned, the kibbutz as a whole takes the question seriously and no decision is reached without thorough study.

Is it this that the Orthodox in the United States oppose?

Obviously not. So a widespread condemnation of Reform and Conservatism in Israel is unwarranted, and Agudath Israel which sees red every time Reform and Conservatism are mentioned should be more precise, and explain in detail what it is that they wish to nip in the bud in Israel.

country and Israel together, but we won't tell you now.

We've visited with him several times in Minneapolis, and we do know that he's been besieged by the Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion to become its national head, and in time we've believed he'll take that offer.

How do you describe him?

Obviously if he's a friend of The Post and Opinion, he is in favor of a free and outspoken press. That he opens the doors to any session of a national organization for us means that he's mature enough not to want to influence the press, but is willing to let the chips fall where they may. At the national convention in New York last summer, we were permitted to report on the resolutions session, and you may recall the comeuppance that Nate Perlmutter got when he took the side of the Orthodox on tuition tax credits. It is something when we can go into the internal fighting in a national organization and tell it like it is.

This is already too long, but meeting at the same time at the Breakers was the Brandeis University fundraising arm, and we walked in to introduce ourselves to Marver Bernstein, whom we had never met. He told us about the time when he headed the second Hillel Unit to be organized after the one at the University of Illinois where Abe Sachar had incubated the idea. He said that he recalled the time when Dr. Sachar came to visit the University of Wisconsin Hillel unit. How history winds around so that it would be Dr. Bernstein who would succeed Dr. Sachar at Brandeis.

When Students Get Runaround In Petition For Saving Jews

Editor, POST and OPINION:

In last week's issue you had an editorial on the Jewish community's action (or inaction) during the Holocaust crisis, relating to saving Jews from Europe.

On the same day that I read your editorial, I got the enclosed exchange of letters from two history professors at The American University who are doing research on the attitude of the American government to Jewish refugees during that terrible period. Under the Freedom of Information Act, they have been going through materials in the United States' government Archives here in the Washington area and came across the enclosed letter which I wrote to President Roosevelt in 1943 when I was the Hillel director on the campus of Penn State. The letter was attached to a reply, also duplicated herewith and the exchange was declassified.

In light of your editorial, I thought that you would find this of personal interest.

Mr. President:

I am enclosing the signatures of 115 men and women residents of State College, Pennsylvania and students at the Pennsylvania State College, all of whom respectfully petition you, Mr. President, and the Congress of the United States to "adopt immediate and effective measures" in behalf of the fated Jewish people of Europe. By reference from the White House, I acknowledge the receipt of your letter and petition of November 5, 1943 from the men and women of State College, Pennsylvania, and students at the Pennsylvania State College to adopt immediate and effective measures in behalf of the Jewish people of Europe.

I can assure you that the problem is receiving the sympathetic attention of various departments and officials in the government and that all measures which may be taken in conformity with the requirements for the successful prosecution of the war will be studied with care.

Wrong To Give Space To Messianic Jews

Editor, POST and OPINION,

It is terribly upsetting to me to see space wasted in a Jewish newspaper on apostates who call themselves Messianic Jews. To give these enemies of Judaism a platform from which to spew forth their propaganda to the detriment of our faith cannot be condoned on the grounds of freedom of the press. The undisputed fact is that one who accepts Jesus is not a Jew. He is a Christian.

The ironic fact about these Messianic Jews is that they cannot last long. They and their children, being actually Christians, will tend to associate more and more with other Christians, eventually intermarry into the traditional Christian community and be completely swallowed up. It is sad to think that these people who destroyed our bodies, six million Jewish bodies, only a short time ago are now intent on destroying our souls.

Rabbi Shiryon Second, Not First On Aliyah

Editor, POST and OPINION:

I wish to clarify a statement in the Feb. 2 edition of The Post and Opinion. Rabbi Sandra Shiryon is not the first woman rabbi to make aliyah. Rabbi Gail Shuster-Bouskilla settled in Israel immediately after her graduation from the Reconstructionist Rabbinical College in 1979. She, her Israeli husband, Raphael, and two sons live in Jerusalem. Rabbi Shuster is employed with the Ministry of Education and as a consultant for the Rockefeller Museum.

We Wish Rabbi Shiryon a hearty mazal tov and look forward to the time when women rabbis not only live in Israel but serve as rabbis there.

Israel Bonds Must Carry Larger Share Of Israel's Budget

Just returned from a week-long 1983 Israel Bonds Prime Minister's and Canal Founders Conference, in Israel, convened at the invitation of Prime Minister Menachem Begin, Hart Hasten of Indianapolis reported that the country conveyed a mood of "Purposefulness, confidence and progress."

"The 210 delegates from the United States, Canada, Western Europe and Latin America at the Prime Minister's and Canal Founders Conference left Israel on a note of resolve to do more and work harder than ever to meet an even greater share of Israel's development budget in 1983," said Hasten.

Hasten, accompanied by his wife Simona, had several private meetings with Prime Minister Begin and other government leaders.

An invitation was extended from the Conference rostrum by Prime Minister Menachem Begin to King Hussein to join the peace process. The invitation was extended within terms of the 1978 Camp David Peace Agreement with "no deviations, no contradictions, no detractions, no additions that would change its meaning."

Earlier in his address to the closing Conference session, the Prime Minister had said, "there is no nation in the world which years for peace more than the people of Israel." He added that the Jewish people has "a perfect, an inalienable right to live in Israel, in all its parts."

Criticizing those who attacked the Jewish people's historical claims to settlement in Judea and Samaria, he declared "we were born in Judea and Samaria as a people. It is an integral part of our security."

"The Middle East seems to be thawing out old frozen alignments, and new developments, triggered by Israel's Operation Peace for the Galilee, seem to be on the verge of breaking through. Delegates to the Conference gained the distinct impression that 1983 will be a year of major new developments in the Middle East, advancing the process initiated by the Egyptian-Israeli Peace Accords," said Mr. Hasten.

During a reception at the President's Residence, the President of Israel, Yitzhak Navon related his impressions of his recent trip to the United States and said that he had, with his contact with the U.S. Government, conveyed the areas of consensus within Israel as opposed to those of conflict. Since he is fluent in the Arabic language, the President stated that he reads the Arab press and is pleased to note that despite anti-Israel comments and anti-Semitic cartoons in the Egyptian press, President Hosni Mubarak, when addressing his own people, affirms his continuing belief in the peace treaty with Israel and the peace process. Conversely, PLO leader Yasser Arafat, despite ambiguous public statements to the world press about readiness to recognize Israel, continues to speak of the elimination of Israel when he addresses his Arab audiences through the Arab language press.

Among Conference highlights was the dedication of a marker and burial of a capsule containing the names of Canal Founders at the site where digging will begin shortly on the outlet structure of the Mediterranean-Dead Sea Canal near Mt. Yair on the Dead Sea. Delegates were told by Minister of Energy and Infrastructure Yitzhak Moda'i that working designs will begin shortly on the $1.4 billion hydroelectric power plant and Inter-Seas Water Conduit, which is expected to spark a new phase of Negev development and initiate a host of major economic spinoff projects.

The Conference also visited the test facility conducted by the government-owned Mediterranean-Dead Sea Co., where final research on chemical, microbiological, meteorological, and geophysical features of the vast construction enterprise are being examined.

As part of their briefing, Conference participants were addressed by Israel's Chief of Staff, Lieut. Gen. Rafael Eitan, and spent a day touring the Eastern Front positions of the Israel Defense Forces in Lebanon's Bekaa Valley, where they watched tank exercises and met frontline troops.

Israeli proposals to construct anti-terror supervision stations in Southern Lebanon manned by Israeli troops, were outlined to the Conference delegates by Minister of Defence Ariel Sharon, who explained the main object of terrorist organizations. He outlined reasons why this supervision task should not be entrusted to American troops, a multinational force or UNIFIL, insisting that only Lebanese forces once eventually rebuilt and adequately reorganized, could perform this task.

Optimism about achieving an agreement with Jordan on autonomy for the inhabitants of Judea, Samaria and Gaza, was expressed by Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir. He insisted on the development of "Normal peaceful and good neighborly relationships" with Lebanon, saying that the real threat to Lebanese sovereignty comes not from Israel's quest for mutual security but from "those Arab governments opposed to peace."

A positive picture of Israel's economic situation was presented by the Minister of Finance Yoram Aridor, who contrasted Israel's current rate of unemployment of 2% with high rates prevailing elsewhere in the world.

"It is a remarkable fact somehow ignored by the world press, that while such major nations as Mexico, Poland, Nigeria and others have deep trouble meeting capital and interest payments on national debts, Israel has never delayed any payments on her national debt by so much as a single day," Hasten stated.

He continued that Israel's insistence on full employment was perhaps a key to the success of her unique economic policy. While in shekel terms, Israel did experience an unusually high inflation, Ministry officials informed the group

Tennis Star Margolin Not Lucky Here

(Continued From Page IN 4) this high ranking number by practicing two-three hours daily. An unfortunate ankle injury kept her back from participating in tournaments during the past year, but still, according to the official computer rating she is still the 100th best female player in the world.

Stacy, who lives with her mother, used to belong to a Reform congregation when she was younger. Now — as she said — she is on the courts too much and that interferes with visits to the synagogue. The GINNY Tournament did not prove to be lucky for Stacy. She had to drop out on the second day when she lost to Coleen Cummings with 6-2, 2-6, 7-6.

Stacy is on the road now, but hopes to be back in Indianapolis again this summer, to try to win some trophies at the U.S. Open Clay Court Tournaments. Her ambition is to be once again among the top 20 female tennis players in the world.

Indianapolis Opera To Present Donizetti's 'Elixir Of Love'

The Indianapolis Opera's third production in the current opera season is Gaetano Donizetti's sparkling opera buffa, The Elixir of Love. The 10 performances, to be sung in English, will be at the Murat Theatre, 502 N. New Jersey St., Indianapolis, on Friday, March 11 at 8 p.m. and on Sunday, March 13 at 2:30 p.m.

Tickets for the 10 production are available at Ross & Babcock, Indianapolis Hilton, 31 W. Ohio Street, Indianapolis; at L.S. Ayres Stores ticket booths; at the Indianapolis Symphony Box Office in Clowes Memorial Hall; or by calling Charge-A-Ticket at (317) 637-7000. They also may be purchased at the Murat Theatre Box Office one hour before curtain time. Ticket prices regularly are $6, $12, $17, and $26. Group and Senior Citizen discounts are available. For information, contact the Indianapolis Opera; 708 E. Michigan Street, Suite 100; Indianapolis, IN 46202; or by phone at (317) 631-ARIA (2742).

The Production

In the March 11 and 13 production, bass-baritone David Kline will make his 10 debut as Dr. Dulcamara, the con man who peddles a "cure-all" elixir. Kline is perhaps best known for his appearances in the great buffo roles of Dulcamara, Don Alfonso, Don Pasquale, Dr. Bartolo, and Leporello, and the title role in Mozart's The Marriage of Figaro. He has sung the roles with opera companies in New York and elsewhere. In addition, he has created numerous roles, such as the King in Pasatieri's The Goose Girl, Robert in Michael Ching's Levees, Johann Richter in Scott Tilley's The Last Straw, and Hel Helson in Britten's Paul Bunyan. His repertoire includes the roles of Pooh-Bah (The Mikado), Mr. Jenks (The Tender Land), Yamadori (Madame Butterfly) and other standards. Kline has also excelled in such unusual parts as Ford in Vaughan Williams' Sir John in Love, Collatinus in Britten's The Rape of Lu- cretia, and Hu-Tsin in Leone's O'Oracolo.

Performing the roles of the young lovers, Adina and Nemorino, will be Elizabeth Knighton (soprano) and Alay Kays (tenor), who also are making 10 debuts.

Since 1977 when she began her career as an apprentice artist at Wolf Trap, Elizabeth Knighton has earned a reputation as one of the country's important young sopranos, appearing in Carmen as Micaela — who is often portrayed as a colorless nonentity — was hailed by both the Washington Post and the Washington Times as brilliant. Her Adina in the Houston Grand Opera's The Elixir of Love was called a first-rate operatic portrayal. Other roles have included Norina (Don Pasquale), Gretel (Hansel and Gretel), Curley's Wife (Of Mice and Men), and Countess Almaviva (The Marriage of Figaro). She has performed with the Texas Opera Theater, Opera Company of Boston, San Francisco Opera, Opera Theatre of St. Louis, as well as in concert with the San Francisco, Boston, Honolulu, San Jose, Oakland, and Portland Symphonies. In the present season, she made her debut with the Opera Company of Philadelphia in La Rondine and will sing the role of Helen in La Belle Helene in Toronto.

Kays first came into prominence in a national telecast of Kurt Weill's Street Scene from Lincoln Center, drawing acclaim from coast to coast for his singing and acting. The success was repeated in September 1981 when he sang the role of Jack Burden in the Houston Grand Opera's world premiere of Carlisle Floyd's Willie Stark, which was telecast in a two-hour version on PBS. He has also received high praise for recent starring roles in Washington Opera productions at Kennedy Center, including Handel's Semele, Rossini's The Barber of Seville, and Mozart's The Magic Flute. He has performed with many opera companies in the U.S., including New York City Opera, Hawaii Opera Theatre, Opera Theatre of St. Louis, Greater Miami Opera, Pittsburgh Opera, and the Lake George Opera Festival. Other cities where he is singing leading roles this season include Baltimore, Cincinnati, Eugene, New Orleans, Salt Lake City, Syracuse, and Toronto.

Robert Orth, baritone, returns to the Indianapolis area for his first opera stage role here. Orth, who sang last summer with the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra in the Conner Prairie series, will be heard as Sgt. Belcore. Last summer he was also seen and heard in the national telecast of Lee Hoiby's opera of Tennessee Williams' Summer and Smoke. He combines both the standard roles and modern works in his repertoire, recently singing five roles in four contemporary operas at the Aspen Music Festival. With the Minnesota Opera, he premiered Rosina, a sequel by Hiram Titus to Mozart's The Marriage of Figaro. He has performed Carmine Burana with the Milwaukee Symphony, and has appeared with opera companies in Syracuse, Rochester, Buffalo, Cleveland, and Memphis, among others, and is a favorite with the Skylight Opera in Milwaukee. Based in Chicago, he has performed leading roles with the Chicago Opera since its beginning.

Knighton, Kays, and Orth will repeat their roles in April with the Opera Theater of Syracuse, which shares productions with the Indianapolis Opera.

Jane West, soprano, sings the role of Gianetta, a village girl. She has previously sung with the Indianapolis Opera in the chorus and in the diverse roles of Cunegonde (Candide) and Hansel (Hansel and Gretel). She also has performed with 10 in the roles of Kate (Madame Butterfly) and Frasquita (Carmen). She was soprano soloist earlier this season with the Lafayette Bach Choral Singers in a performance of Mozart's Mass in C Minor, and has been soloist with the Indianapolis Philharmonic and the Pendleton Festival Symphony Orchestras. A Butler University graduate with a Master's Degree in voice, she is a member of the Indianapolis Opera Ensemble and is soprano soloist at North

Elixir Of Love At IO

United Methodist Church in Indianapolis.

Performances of The Elixir of Love will be accompanied by the Indianapolis Opera Orchestra, James Caraher conducting. The IO chorus is under the direction of Michael Dixon. Sets have been designed by Brian Covington and are being constructed jointly for the Indianapolis Opera and the Opera Theater of Syracuse. Robert B. Driver, IO Artistic Director, is in charge of the production and is stage director. Caraher and Driver also will be music and artistic directors for the Syracuse production.

Story Of The Opera

The story of The Elixir of Love is simple, especially in comparison with the stories of many 19th century Italian operas. Nemorino, a young farmer and the opera's hero, dotes on Adina, the heroine. For her part, however, she prefers to remain a free spirit for the time being. Yet she isn't so much indifferent to Nemorino as frustrated over his lack of courage in coming to the point of his affections for her. The plot thickens a bit with the arrival of the arrogant Sgt. Belcore, who immediately sets his sights on winning Adina by storm. All hope seems lost for Nemorino until Dr. Dulcamara appears with the "elixir of love". A con artist of the first rank, Dulcamara introduces himself to the villagers as the greatest medical genius of the age, known throughout the universe and elsewhere. He claims his "medicine" will cure every ailment, restore old men to youthful vigor, erase wrinkles, and accomplish many other remarkable deeds. It is the same liquid he later sells to Nemorino as the "elixir of love" — and, he claims, it is the same love potion given by Tristan to Isolde. It is, however, nothing more than a cheap Bordeaux wine. At the end of the opera, Nemorino has won Adina — and has inherited a substantial fortune from his just-deceased uncle; Sgt. Belcore philosophically comments that it's all for the best, since girls by the thousands are waiting for a handsome soldier like himself; and Dulcamara, who never misses a chance for a profitable scam, sells out his elixir to the villagers after pointing out that it not only brings lovers together, but it brings riches as well. The opera closes with Dulcamara riding out of town, on his way to his next village of victims.

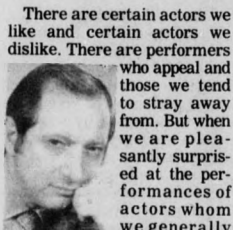

Background Of The Opera

The Donizetti opera has survived in the popular repertory for almost 151 years (it premiered on May 12, 1832), although it was written on deadline in less than one month. Sometime in April 1832, the manager of Milan's Teatro Cannobiana asked Donizetti to come up with a work he could put on in place of one commissioned from another composer who had defaulted on his contract. Felice Romani, one of the most skilled librettists of the day, agreed to write the text. Donizetti composed the music day by day as he received bits and pieces of the libretto from Romani. Even with inadequate rehearsal and a mediocre cast, The Elixir of Love had a triumphant opening. The score is one of Donizetti's finest (he wrote almost 70 operas during his 51-year lifetime), and in it, perhaps better than in his other works, he blended two main currents of the Bel Canto era: wit and lyricism. Thanks to Romani's sensitivity and Donizetti's music, the young lovers in the opera move us as easily as they make us laugh.

That Championship Season

Epstein

There are certain actors we like and certain actors we dislike. There are performers who appeal and those we tend to stray away from. But when we are pleasantly surprised at the performances of actors whom we generally do not go out of the way to see, this should be admitted.

As you already know, Bruce Dern is my favorite psycho. If you have seen one of his madmen you have seen his all. Stacey Keach is another performer I do not go out of my way to see. Paul Sorvino is admirable but isn't magic magnet. Martin Sheen is a very talented actor whom I just have not appreciated yet.

These four, Bruce Dern, Stacey Keach, Paul Sorvino and Martin Sheen, are the decisive reason to see That Championship Season. Never before have I seen such audience reaction to acting ability on the screen. These four superb performers take it away from the one whom I thought would be the best, Robert Mitchum.

Robert Mitchum plays an aging coach, or really ex-coach of a high school basketball team which won the Pennsylvania State title 24 years ago. He has a reunion with four members of that unusual team.

Of the five main characters in this film Mitchum seems to be miscast and is most certainly the weakest. Having gone to this movie because of Robert Mitchum, I was gravely disappointed. But at the same time ecstatic at experiencing four thrilling performances I had not expected.

The aforementioned performances came in spite of such a heavy handed directorial manner. Jason Miller handled his script with a sledge hammer. His weakness proved as static as Mitchum's. Obviously the play is vastly superior to the film.

However not recommending the four performances previously mentioned would be a sin. Each in his own masterful way carries his weight, does his thing, and keeps the audience in awe and bewilderment. Each gives to the other when giving is necessary. And not only is each performance brilliantly portrayed separately, the four together make for a spectacular assembly of talent. Even though Mitchum, the direction and static film making may not impress, That Championship Season is a worthwhile trip to the movie house for some extraordinary display of acting by Bruce Dern, Stacey Keach, Paul Sorvino and Martin Sheen.

Scholarship Fund Concert To Be Held

The many friends of Eric Rosenblith, former concert master of the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra, will be happy to know that he and his wife, Carol Rosenblith, will be in Indianapolis to perform in their annual concert for the Margaret Sear Rosenblith Ballet Scholarship Fund. This concert will be held on Monday, Feb. 28, at 8 p.m., in the Robertson Chapel at Butler University. Scholarship fund contributions will be accepted at the door.

Another reason that the concert will be of special interest to the Indianapolis Jewish community is that the pianist on the program will be Gabriel Chodos, son of Israel Chodos, former rabbi of Cong. Beth-El Zedek. His first piano teacher was none other than Evelyn Roskin, who was organist and choir director at Beth-El Zedek Temple.

Mr. Chodos has become a world renowned concert pianist, and is now on the artist faculty of the New England Conservatory in Boston. He received a masters of musicology degree and is Phi Beta Kappa in Philosophy from the University of Southern California. Subsequently, he studied in Vienna, and at the Mozarteum in Salzburg. He has won several piano competitions and has been soloist with many symphony orchestras, as well as performing concert recitals throughout the world.

Opera Consortium To Hold Auditions

The Consortium of Indiana Advocates of Opera will hold its second annual singers auditions in Indianapolis on May 6 and 7. Co-sponsored by Butler University's Jordan College of Fine Arts, the CIAO auditions will be held in Clowes Memorial Concert Hall on the Butler campus.

The auditions, which last year attracted 150 singers, serve as a job bank for outstanding young artists. There is no age or residency restriction for applicants.

The nine CIAO-member opera groups and other musical organizations from Indiana and surrounding states will send representatives to hear the auditions. CIAO members are: Indiana University Opera Theater; Indianapolis Opera; IUPUI-Ft. Wayne Opera Workshop; Michiana Opera Guild; Northern Indiana Opera Association; Northwest Indiana Opera Theater; Notre Dame Orchestra Opera; Opera de Lafayette; and Whitewater Opera Company.

Applicants must complete a CIAO Auditions Application form, which is available from any member company, or by writing: Indiana Arts Commission, 155 E. Market St., Suite 614, Indianapolis, IN 46204. The completed form, a cassette tape recording, one 8x10 photograph, and a non-refundable $10 processing fee must be received by Tuesday, March 8, 1983. Completed applications and other materials should be sent to: 1983 Auditions, c/o Whitewater Opera Company, P.O. Box 633, Richmond, IN 47374. Applicants will be notified of their audition status by April 15.

For the auditions, applicants will sing one aria, and should be prepared to sing two other selections, with one of the three in English.

An accompanist will be provided, or singers may use their own.

Each musical organization attending the auditions will make its own contacts with singers in which it is interested.

Vance du Rivage, managing director of the Indianapolis Opera and vice president of CIAO, stated: "I know of no other state that offers such an opportunity for young artists to be heard by so many opera managers and musical organizations."

CIAO was organized in 1980 to encourage and develop high quality operatic production in Indiana. The group is funded in part by the Indiana Arts Commission.

Randolph Brahm To Lecture On The Holocaust At IU

The Jewish Studies Program at Indiana University announces an upcoming lecture by Professor Randolph Brahm entitled "Silence and Madness: The Holocaust in Hungary," on Thursday, March 3. The lecture will be held at 4 p.m. in Ballantine Hall 005 on the Bloomington campus.

Dr. Brahm is professor of Political Science and Director of the Jack P. Eisner Institute for Holocaust Studies at the Graduate School of the City University of New York. His many works include the authoritative study The Politics of Genocide: The Holocaust in Hungary.

Brahm's visit, co-sponsored with the Hungarian Chair of the Uralic-Altaic Department, is one of several programs being held this semester to direct serious attention to the Nazi Holocaust. Other events include a panel discussion "Fifty Years Later: Historical Perspectives on the Nazi Seizure of Power" to be held on March 8th at 7:30 p.m. in Woodburn Hall 120 and a lecture by screenwriter Arnost Lustig speaking on "Auschwitz/Birkenau Revisited." Lustig's lecture, which will include a showing of one of his films, Diamonds Of The Night, will be held on April 14th at 8 p.m. in Ballantine Hall 109.

All of these events are open to the public. For further information please contact the Jewish Studies Program at (812) 335-4314 or 335-0453.

Montreal Lads Celebrate Mishnayos Achievement

MONTREAL — More than 250 children marked the completion of the study of Mishnayos B'al Peh (by heart) with a huge gathering in the first of several celebrations that will be marked around the U.S. and Canada in a program sponsored by the National Council of Pirchei Agudath Israel of America. Eliyahu Hirschfeld won top honors when he memorized 2,000 Mishnayos, with runner-up Mordechai Hirschfeld achieving 1,800 Mishnayos. Two other youngsters, Yehuda Glustein and Avrohom Tietz, each studied 1,475 Mishnayos by heart.

Rabbi Mordechai Weinberg and Rabbi Moshe Glustein, the Roshei Yeshiva of Yeshiva Gedolah Merkaz HaTorah in Montreal, praised this unique Torah study program for youngsters for motivating "so many young people to attain great heights in Torah learning and Mitzvah observance." Amongst the youngsters were several bus loads from Toronto and even Far Rockaway, N.Y. In addition to Rabbi Weinberg, the youngsters also heard words of praise from Rabbi Glustein and Rabbi Pinchos Hirschprung, the Chief Rabbi of this city who personally tested the four top winners on the Thursday preceding the Siyum. Others who addressed the youngsters were Rabbi M. Katz, a Rosh Yeshiva at Merkaz HaTorah, and Rabbi Joshua Silbermintz, the national director of Pirchei Agudath Israel who was the guest speaker at the Melave Malka banquet.

While Montreal youngsters were celebrating, preparations were underway for the 20th national Siyum Mishnayos which will take place in New York at Yeshiva Toras Emes Kamenitz on Monzoei Shabbos, Parshas Ki Siso (March 5). Mendy Kramer, the chairman of the Siyum, and Menachem Joseph Nathan, who is the chairman of finances, are predicting one of the largest turnouts in the history of these huge Torah youth celebrations. In addition, preparations are also underway in Cleveland for a Midwest Siyum, Los Angeles for the west coast, and Miami Beach for the south.

Meanwhile, Baltimore will join national Torah festivities by hosting a special Hasmodoh Contest for 250 children who participated in the Succos Hasmodoh Contest, a competition which encourages youngsters to study Torah on their own. These gatherings are part of the stepped up activity of the Agudist youth movement which consists of more than 20,000 youngsters nationwide, led by 1,500 volunteer leaders.

Volunteers are a major factor in Pirchei Agudath Israel's success. At the Montreal reception, several such volunteers were honored, including Fred Pfeifer, president of the Agudath Israel of Montreal, Zecharya Jacobowitz who served as chairman of the Siyum, and Meyer Ament. The Montreal awards are an example of the large cadre of volunteer Torah activists who have played such a vital role in the growth of Pirchei Agudath Israel of America.
